VISHNÚ PURÁNA.

BOOK III.

CHAPTER I.

Account of the several Manus and Manwantaras. Swárochisha, the second Manu : the divinities, the Indra, the seven Řishis, of his period, and his sons. Similar details of Auttami, Támasa, Raivata, Chákshusha, and Vaivaswata. The forms of Vishnú, as the preserver, in each Manwantara. The meaning of Vishnú.

MAITREYA.—The disposition of the earth and of the ocean, and the system of the sun and the planets, the creation of the gods and the rest, the origin of the Řishis, the generation of the four castes, the production of brute creatures, and the narratives of Dhruva and Prahláda, have been fully related by thee, my venerable preceptor. I am now desirous to hear from you the series of all the Manwantaras, as well as an account of those who preside over the respective periods, with Śakra, the king of the gods, at their head.

PARÁŚARA.—I will repeat to you, Maitreya, in their order, the different Manwantaras,—those which are past, and those which are to come.

The first Manu was Swáyambhuva; then came Swárochisha; then, Auttami;* then, Támasa; then, Raivata; then, Chákshusha: these six Manus have passed away. The Manu who presides over the seventh Manwantara, which is the present (period), is Vaivaswata, the son of the Sun.*

* Some of my MSS. have Uttama. See note 2 at p. 5, infra.

The period of Swáyambhuva Manu, in the beginning of the Kalpa, † has already been described by me, together with the gods, Rishis, (and other personages) who then flourished.¹ I will now, therefore, enumerate the presiding gods, Rishis, and sons of the Manu, in the Manwantara of Swárochisha.² The deities of this period (or the second Manwantara) were the classes

¹ The gods were said to be the Yámas (Vol. I., p. 109); the Rishis were Maríchi, Angiras, &c. (Vol. I., p. 100, note 2); and the sons were Priyavrata and Uttánapáda (Vol. I., pp. 107, 108). The Váyu adds, to the Yamas, the Ajitas, who share with the former, it observes, sacrificial offerings. The Matsya, Padma, Brahma Puráñas, and Hari Vanśa ‡ substitute, for the sons, the grandsons, of Swáyambhuva, — Agnidhra and the rest (Vol. II., pp. 101, 102).

² This Manu, according to the legend of his birth in the Márkaṇḍeya Purāṇa, § was the son of Swarochis, so named from the splendour of his appearance, when born, and who was the son of the nymph Varúthini, by the Gandharva Kali. || The text, in another place, makes him a son of Priyavrata. ¶

* Compare the Laws of the Mánavas, I., 61, 62.

† The present Kalpa, the Várāha, from varāha, 'boar'. See Vol. I., pp. 58, 59.

called Párávatas and Tushitas;^{1*} and the king of the gods was the mighty Vipáśchit.† The seven Řishis²

² The Váyu describes the Řishis of each Manwantara as the sons, or, in some cases, the descendants, in a direct line, of the seven sages, Atri, Angiras, Bhřígu, Kaśyapa, Pulaha, Pulastya, and Vasishthá: with some inconsistency; for Kaśyapa, at least, did not appear, himself, until the seventh Manwantara. In the present series,|| Úrja is the son of Vasishthá; Stambha springs from Kaśyapa; Práña, from Bhřígu; Řishabha descends from Angiras; Dattoli is the son of Pulastya; Níšchara springs from Atri; and Arvarivat is the son of Pulaha. The Brahma Puráña and Hari Vanśa¶ have a rather different list, or, Aurva, Stambha, Kaśyapa,

* We read, Vol. II., p. 27, after an enumeration of twelve names: "These, who, in the Chákshusha Manwantara, were the gods called Tushitas, were called the twelve Ádityas, in the Manwantara of Vairavaswata." But our text, as now appears, places the Tushitas in the second Manwantara, not in the sixth: see p. 12, infra. Nor, according to the Váyu-puráña, were they Vishnú, Śakra, &c.

† The Bhágavata-puráña, VIII., I., 20, gives Rochana as the Indra of the second Manwantara or Patriarchate.

‡ Tushitá, according to the same authority, was their mother, as in our text, p. 17, infra.

§ So, rather, the Bhágavata appears to imply: VIII., I., 21.

|| Professor Wilson seems to have followed, here, his own MSS. of the Váyu-puráña, exclusively; and they must differ greatly from those to which I, after him, have access. Instead of Úrja occurs, in these MSS., what looks like a corruption of Turya or Úrva; for Práña, Droña; for Dattoli, Dattátri; for Níšchara, Níšchala; and, for Arvarivat, Dhávat.

¶ Śl. 417.

were Urja, Stambha,* Prāna, Dattoli,† Řishabha, Nis-

Prāna, Bṛihaspati, Chyavana, and Dattoli:‡ but the origin of part of this difference is nothing more than an imperfect quotation from the Vāyu Purāna; the two first, Aurva and Stambha, being specified as the son of Vasishtha and the descendant of Kaśyapa, and then the parentage of the rest being omitted: to complete the seven, therefore, Kaśyapa becomes one of them. Some other errors of this nature occur in these two works, and from the same cause,—a blundering citation§ of the Vāyu, which is named as their authority:

एते महर्षयस्तात वायुप्रोक्ता महाव्रताः ।

A curious peculiarity, also, occurs in these mistakes. They are confined to the first eight Manwantaras. The Brahma Purāna omits all details of the last six; and the Hari Vanśa inserts them fully and correctly, agreeably to the authority of the Vāyu. It looks, therefore, as if the compiler of the Hari Vanśa had followed the Brahma, as far as it went, right or wrong, but had had recourse to the original Vāyu Purāna, when the Brahma failed him. Dattoli is sometimes written Dattoni and Dattotri; and the latter appears to have been the case with the copy of the Hari Vanśa employed by M. Langlois, who || makes one of the Řishis of this Manwantara, “le pénitent Atri.” He is not without countenance in some such reading; for the Padma Purāna changes the name to Dattātreyā, no doubt suggested by Datta-atrī. Dattātreyā, however, is the son of Atri; whilst the Vāyu calls the person of the text the son of Pulastya. There can be no doubt,

* Stamba is an equally common reading in my MSS.

† So read three of my MSS. Variants are Dattoni, Dattori, Dattobhi, Dattokti, Dantoli, Dantobhi, and Dambholi. See, further, Vol. I., p. 154, note †.

‡ In MSS. of the Brahma-purāna I find Stamba and Dattoni. The Calcutta edition of the Harivanśa has Stamba, Kāśyapa, and Dattoni.

chara,* and Arvarivat;† and Chaitra, Kimpurusha, and others were the Manu's sons.¹

In the third period, or Manwantara of Auttami,² Su-therefore, of the correct reading; for the son of Pulastya is Datoli. ‡ (Vol. I., p. 154.)

² The name occurs Auttami, Auttama, and Uttama. The Bhágavata ¶ and Váyu agree with our text (p. 11, infra), in making him a descendant from Priyavrata. The Márkaṇḍeya calls him the son of Uttama, the son of Uttánápáda: †† and this appears to be the correct genealogy, both from our text and the Bhágavata. ‡‡

* One MS. gives Nischira.

† The much more frequent lection known to me is Urvarivat.

‡ There is, I incline to think, room for very grave doubt as to both these points. See note † in p. 4, supra.

§ I do not count so many; and those that I find are very corruptly written.

|| At VIII., I, 20, it says there were seven, but names only Úrja and Stambha. Burnouf melts these two names into one.

¶ It calls him Priyavrata's son: VIII., I., 23.

 LXXII., 39. Auttama is the grandson's name, in the Márkaṇḍeyapuráṇa.

†† LXXIX., 3. Suruchi is there said to be Uttama's mother. For the same parentage, see Vol. I., p. 159, of the present work.

(see Vol. I., p. 155), in the Swáyambhuva Manwantara; and these were born again, as the Rishis of the third period. The names of these persons, according to the Matsya and Padma, are, however, very different from those of the sons of Vasishtha given in Vol. I., p. 155, or, Kaukuṇḍihi, Kuruṇḍi, Dálbhya, Śankha, Praváhita, Mita, and Samṁita. §

§ I have put Dálbhya for "Dalaya", on manuscript authority. The Bhágavata-purána, VIII., I., 24, names only Pramada, out of the seven; and he is not of the family as detailed in IV., I., 41, 42. See Vol. I., p. 155, note 3.

¹ Severally, according to the Váyu, the progeny of Bhṛigu, Kaśyapa, Angiras, Pulastya, Atri, Vasishtha, and Pulaha. There is considerable variety in some of the names. Thus, the Matsya has Kavi, Prīthu, Agni, Akapi, Kapi, Jalpa, || Dhímat. The Hari Vanśa ¶ has Kāvya, Prīthu, Agni, Jahnu, Dhátri,  Kapívat, Akapívat. For the two last the Váyu reads Gátra and Vanapítha. The son of Pulaha is in his place (Vol. I., p. 155, note 1),—Arvarívat or Vanakapívat. Gátra is amongst the sons of Vasishtha (Vol. I., p. 155). The Váyu is, therefore, probably, most correct, although our text, in regard to these two denominations, admits of no doubt: †† अग्निर्वनकस्तथा पीवरश्च । ‡‡

² The Váyu, &c. agree with the text; the Váyu naming eleven. The Brahma, Matsya, and Padma have a series of ten names, Sutapas, Tapomūla, &c., of which seven are the Ṛishis of the twelfth Manwantara. §§

* This parenthesis was supplied by the Translator.

† Five of my MSS. read Varada. Two of my MSS. of the Mārkaṇḍeya-purāṇa have Vanaka; the third, Varuṇa. The Calcutta edition, LXXIV., 59, gives Valaka.

‡ In one MS. is Śántihaya; and, in one, Śántihavya.

§ The Bhāgavata-purāṇa, VIII., I., 27, represents him as brother of Uttama.

² The Brahma inserts, of these, only the Abhútarajasas, with

* Two MSS. have Ábhútaramas; two, Ábhútarayas; both which words look very like depravations of the reading in all my other copies, to-wit, Ábhútarajas. The ordinary reading of the line containing this term is:

अमिताभभूतरजा वैकुण्ठाः ससुमेधसः ।

That the first two names must be taken as welded into a compound embodying Ábhútarajas is attempted to be shown in note || in the next page. See, further, note ¶, p. 17, infra. And hence the “Abhútarajasas” — i. e., Abhútarajasas — of Professor Wilson may be open to correction, as regards its first syllable. Moreover, on the assumption that his MSS. were like mine, he has substituted the longer ending of the word for the shorter. See Vol. II., p. 101, note *; and p. 107, note †.

The Sanskrit scholar will have noticed, that, other considerations permitting, the line just quoted might yield Bhútarajas. The reading, unquestionably, of the Bhāgavata-purāṇa, VIII., V., 3, omits the vowel at the beginning. It is Bhútarayas; and it involves a corruption, I take it, as to its y, such as we have in Ábhútarayas. The Márkaṇḍeya-purāṇa, LXXV., 71, has, in my three MSS., Ábhútanayas or Bhútanayas, which, as could be shown, may easily have grown out of Ábhútarajas. The Calcutta edition exhibits Bhúpatīs!

† In the singular, Sumedhas. Three MSS. agree in reading Susamedhasas.

‡ The Bhāgavata-purāṇa, VIII., V., 2, calls him uterine brother of Tāmasa. And see p. 11, note ‡, infra.

Langlois,¶ in rendering the parallel passage of the Hari Vamśa, has confounded the epithet and the subject: 'dont les dieux furent les Pracritis, dépourvus de colère et de passion.' He is, also, at a loss what to do with the terms Pāriplava and Raibhya, in the following passage, पारिप्लवश्च रैभ्यश्च,†† asking: 'Qu'est-ce que Pāriplava? qu'est-ce que Rēbhya?' If he had had the commentary at hand, these questions would have been unnecessary: they are there said to be two classes of divinities: पारिप्लवो रैभ्यश्च देवतागणविशेषौ ।‡‡

§ The Bhāgavata-purāṇa, VIII., V., 3, says that they were, with others, Hiraṇyāroman, Vedaśrīras, and Ūrdhwabāhu.

|| The Sanskrit allows us to take the word as Ābhūtarajases; meaning, perhaps, 'endowed with activity—rajas—as far as that possessed by the Bhūtas.' See Vol. I., p. 83; and Vol. II., p. 74, note 2.

The Vāyu-purāṇa speaks of the Amītābhas and Ābhūtarajas:

अमृताभाभूतरजा वैकुण्ठाः ससुमेधसः ।

For, just below this, it has the line:

इत्येतानीह नामानि आभूतरजसं विदुः ।

On now comparing note * in the last page with note ¶ at p. 17, infra, it will be seen, that the gods under discussion were characterized by their possession, not want, of activity. In the latter passage here referred to, all Professor Wilson's MSS., including those now at Oxford, have, like my own, संभूतो राजसैः, or else संभूतो मानसैः.

¹ Chákshusha, according to the best authorities, descended from Dhruva (see Vol. I., p. 177): but the Márkaṇḍeya has a legend of his birth as the son of a Kshattriya named Anamitra; of his being exchanged, at his birth, for the son of Viśránta Rāja, and being brought up, by the prince, as his own; of his revealing the business, when a man, and propitiating Brahmá by his devotions, in consequence of which, he became a Manu. In his former birth, he was born from the eye of Brahmá, whence his name, from Chakshus, 'the eye.' ||

* Sāmbhāvya is the reading of five MSS.; Swasāmbhāvya, that of one.

† Only Arjuna and Balivindhya are named in the Bhāgavata-purāṇa, VIII., V., 2.

‡ Uttama, as before, is here a variant. The Vishnú-purāṇa is at odds with itself, if it here derives Auttami from Priyavrata,—not from Uttānapāda. See Vol. I. p. 159: also, p. 5, note ¶; p. 7, note 3; p. 8, note §; p. 9, note ‡, supra.

"Descended from Priyavrata" translates प्रियव्रतान्वयाः; and "for his posterity", आत्मवंशजान्. We may render: "one in lineage with Priyavrata"; but hardly, considering the context, "as his kindred", instead of "for his posterity". Uttānapāda and Priyavrata were brothers.

 See Book IV., Chapters I.—V., where I return to these kings.

†† Three MSS. have Nábhaga. As will be seen further on, this king should seem to bear another name, that of Nřiga, which word several of my copies give here, as the reading.

‡‡ In two MSS., Dhřishthá; in one, Vishánu; the former of which lections is of no account.

§§ Here I correct the "Sanyati" of the original edition. Half my MSS. have Saryáti.

||| Not one of my MSS. has this reading. Six—like two of Professor Wilson's, now at Oxford—give Nábhaga and Dishthá; two, Nábhaga and Arishthá; one, Nábhaga and Dishthá; one, Nabhaga and Dishthá; one, Nábhaga and Dishthá, &c. Moreover, it is shown, in the next page, that at least one of the commentators understands two kings to be here spoken of. And there is strong ground for believing that herein he is right.

Professor Wilson's choice of name—to which there is nothing, in any of the MSS. he used, nearer than नाभो नेदिष्टः, occurring in one of them—must have been suggested by the Nábhānedishthá of the Rigveda and other ancient writings, to whom he refers in a note to Book IV., Chapter I.

करूपश्च पृषधश्च वसुमँल्लोकविश्रुतः ।

On this it is remarked, in one of the commentaries, the other being silent: वसुमँल्लोकविश्रुत इति विशेषणद्वयं पृषधस्यैव । वसुमान्वैर्यवान् । वसिष्ठश्च जातेऽपि क्षोभाभावाल्लोकविश्रुतः सर्वसंगपरित्यागेन मुक्तिप्राप्तेः । तथा सति नव पुत्रा महाबला इति नवत्वमुपपन्नं भवति । That is to say, the "Vasumat" of the text is an epithet of Prishadhra, denoting 'fortitudinous'.

It is thus evident how the commentator here makes out the exact tale of nine kings.

Discordantly, the Bhāgavata-purāṇa, VIII., XIII., 2, 3, has Ikshwāku, Nabhaga, Dhṛishta, Śaryāti, Narishyanta, Nabhāga, Dishā, Karúsha, Prishadhra, and Vasumat,—ten, as it distinctly states. Reference will be made, in the sequel, to IX., I., 12. See, for nine sons of Vaivaswata, the Mārkaṇdeya-purāṇa, LXXIX., 11, 12.

At present, it need only be added, that the Váyu-purāṇa, professing to name but nine sons of the reigning Mannu, makes Prámśu the last, and says nothing of Vasumat as one of his brothers. Later Purāṇas than the Váyu have manipulated its statements with a very free hand. For instance, the first line of the stanza in which it speaks of the sixth and seventh of Vaivaswata's Rishis, served, pretty certainly, as the type of the quotation given above; and hence the creation, there, of Vasumat. This stanza is thus expressed:

षष्ठो वसिष्ठपुत्रस्तु वसुमँल्लोकविश्रुतः ।

वत्सारः काश्यपस्यैव सप्तैते साधुसंमताः ॥

Of the two commentaries adduced in my annotations, that which I have hitherto designated as the smaller becomes, here at the beginning of Book III., considerably the ampler. From this point, not to mislead, I shall, till further notice, distinguish it as B; the other being called A.

and gods sprung from Bhṛigu and Angiras.† The Bhágavata‡ adds the Řibhus;§ and most include the two Aświns, as a class. Of the Maruts, however, the Hari Vaníśa remarks, that they are born in every Manwantara, seven times seven (or forty-nine); that, in each Manwantara, four times seven (or twenty-eight) obtain emancipation, but their places are filled up by persons reborn in that character. So the commentator explains the passages

मन्वन्तरे व्यतिक्रान्ते चत्वारः सप्तका गणाः । ¶

सप्तसप्तका एकोनपञ्चाशत्परुतो देवाः प्रतिमन्वन्तरे भवन्ति । Commentary. तेषां मध्ये चत्वारः सप्तका अष्टाविंशति मरुतः । Commentary. It may be suspected, however, that these passages have been derived from the simple statement of the Matsya, that, in all the Manwantaras, classes of Řishis appear by seven and seven, and, having established a code of law and morality, depart to felicity:

मन्वन्तरेषु सरेषु सप्त सप्त महर्षयः ।

कृत्वा धर्मव्यवस्थानं प्रयान्ति परमं पदम् ॥

The Váyu has a rather different list of the seven Řishis: or, Vasumat, the son of Vasishthá; Vatsára, descended from Kaśyapa;

* विष्णुशक्तिरनीपम्या सत्त्वोद्भक्ता स्थितौ स्थिता ।

मन्वन्तरेष्वशेषेषु देवत्वेनाधितिष्ठति ॥

† With this enumeration corresponds that in the Márk.-pur., LXXIX., 1.

‡ At VIII., XIII., 4, it adds, to the Ádityas, Vasus, and Rudras, the Viśve devas, Maruts, Aświns, and Řibhus.

* अग्नेन तस्य जज्ञे ऽसौ यज्ञः स्वायम्भुवे ऽन्तरे ।

On this the two commentaries remark: तस्य विष्णोरग्नेन स्वायम्भुव-मन्वन्तरे । आकूत्यां मातरि यज्ञसंज्ञ उत्पन्नो जज्ञे बभूवेत्यर्थः । यद्वा । प्रथमे ऽन्तरे ऽवसरे ब्रह्मणो मानसो य उत्पन्नो रुचिस्तस्मात्पितुर्जज्ञे इति ।

According to this, "From a portion of him Yajna was born, in the Swāyambhuva Manwantara, of Ākūti; or, in this first Manwantara, Yajna was born from Ruchi, a god will-begotten of Brahmā." Hence the term mānasa must be taken to allude to Ruchi, Ākūti's husband, born from Brahmā in the first epoch of the Swāyambhuva Patriarchate. Mānasa cannot be applied to the child of a virgin. Males, not females, had will-begotten offspring.

† I find Ūru; also, Kuśa. See Book IV., Chapter VII.

‡ Corrected from "Gautama". This, importing 'son of Gotama', is Śaradwat's patronymic. See Book IV., Chapter XIX.

§ Corrected from "Utathya". In Vol. I., p. 153, note 2, I have amended "Uttathya".

In Professor Wilson's Translation of the R̥gveda, Vol. II., p. 63, appears "Uchatthya"—recte, Uchathya—as father of Dirghatamas; and it is added, in a note: "The reading of the Purāṇas is, invariably, Uttathya." "Utathya" occurs ibid., p. 83, note 6. These spellings, which I have never met with, must be incorrect; as the etymology—uchatha, 'praise'—of the Vaidik form of the name, Uchathya, clearly evinces.

These and suchlike minutiae are not purposeless, seeing that the great Sanskrit Dictionary of Messrs. Boehtlingk and Roth inserts so copiously, as variants, transformations of proper names which owe their existence to mere inadvertence, but the reality or unreality of which cannot be judged of in the absence of manuscripts.

The first of these (Book VIII., Chapters 15—23) relates the penance and sacrifices of Bali, son of Virochana, by which he had overcome Indra and the gods, and obtained supreme dominion over the three spheres. Vishnú, at the request of the deities, was born as a dwarf, Vámana, the son of Aditi by Kaśyapa; who, applying to Bali for alms, was promised, by the prince, whatever he might demand, notwithstanding Śukra, the preceptor of the Daityas, apprised him whom he had to deal with. The dwarf demanded as much space as he could step over at three steps, and, upon the assent of Bali, enlarged himself to such dimensions as to stride over the three worlds. Being worshipped, however, by Bali and his ancestor Prahláda, he conceded to them the sovereignty of Pátála.

CHAPTER II.

Of the seven future Manus and Manwantaras. Story of Sanjná and Chháyá, wives of the Sun. Sávaríi, son of Chháyá, the eighth Manu. His successors, with the divinities, &c. of their respective periods. Appearance of Vishnú in each of the four Yugas.

MAITREYA.—You have recapitulated to me, most excellent Brahman, the particulars of the past Manwantaras. Now give me some account of those which are to come.

PARÁŚARA.—Sanjná, the daughter of Viśwakarman, was the wife of the Sun, and bore him three children, the Manu (Vaivaswata), Yama, and the goddess Yamí (or the Yamuná river). Unable to endure the fervours of her lord, Sanjná gave him Chháyá,¹ as his handmaid, and repaired to the forests, to practise devout exercises.* The Sun, supposing Chháyá to be his wife ¹ That is, her shadow, or image. It also means 'shade.' The Bhágavata, † however, makes both Sanjná and Chháyá daughters of Viśwakarman. According to the Matsya, Vivaswat, the son of Kaśyapa and Aditi, had three wives: Rájñi, the daughter of Raivata, by whom he had Revanta; Prabhá, by whom he had Prabháta; and, by Sanjná, the daughter of Twashítí, the Manu, and Yama, and Yamuná. The story then proceeds much as in the text.

* "Devout exercises" renders tapas.

† VIII., XIII., 8. In the next stanza it adds, that some give the Sun a third wife, Vaḍavá. The commentator, Śrídharma, identifies her, nevertheless, with Sanjná, who is said—VI., VI., 38—to have been transformed into a mare—vaḍavá.

Sanjná, begot, by her, three other children, Śanaishchara (Saturn), another Manu (Sávarí*), and a daughter, Tapatí (the Taptee river). Chháyá, upon one occasion, being offended with Yama,¹ the son of Sanjná, denounced an imprecation upon him, and, thereby, revealed to Yama, and to the Sun, that she was not, in truth, Sanjná, the mother of the former.† Being further informed, by Chháyá, that his wife had gone to the wilderness, the Sun beheld her, by the eye of meditation,‡ engaged in austerities, in the figure of a mare, (in the region of Uttara Kuru§). Metamorphosing himself into a horse, he rejoined his wife, and begot three other children,—the two Aświns|| and Revanta,—and then brought Sanjná back to his own dwelling. To diminish his intensity, Viśwakarma placed the luminary on his lathe, to grind off some of his effulgence, and, in this manner, reduced it an eighth: for more

The Bhágavata calls the two last Manus Deva-sávarṇi and Indra-sávarṇi.

‡ In a single MS. is Dhṛitiketū.

§ The former edition had "Dṛiptiketū", for which I find no authority. A plurality of my MSS. read, like the Váyu-purāṇa, as above; while five have Díptaketū; and two, Dásaketū.

In what manner Vishnú, who is characterized by the attribute of providence* during the four ages, effected their preservation, I will next, Maitreya, explain.

In the Kńíta age, Vishnú, in the form of Kapila and other (inspired teachers), assiduous for the benefit of all creatures, imparts to them true wisdom. In the Tretá age, he restrains the wicked, in the form of a universal monarch,¹ and protects the three worlds. In the Dwápara age, in the person of Veda-vyása, he divides the one Veda into four, and distributes it into innumerable† branches;‡ and, at the end of the Kali (or fourth age), he appears as Kalki, and reestablishes the iniquitous in the paths (of rectitude). CHAPTER III.

Division of the Veda into four portions, by a Vyása, in every Dwápara age. List of the twenty-eight Vyásas of the present Manwantara. Meaning of the word Brahma.

MAITREYA.—I have learned from you, in due order, how this world is Vishnú, (how it is) in Vishnú, (how it is) from Vishnú: nothing further is to be known. But I should desire to hear how the Vedas were divided, in different ages,* by that great being, in the form of Veda-vyása; who were the Vyásas of their respective eras; and what were the branches into which the Vedas were distributed.

PARÁŚARA.—The branches of the (great) tree of the Vedas are so numerous,† Maitreya, that it is impossible to describe them at length. I will give you a summary account of them.

In every Dwápara (or third) age, Vishnú, in the person of Vyása, in order to promote the good of mankind, divides the Veda, which is (properly, but) one, into many portions. Observing the limited perseverance, energy, and application of mortals, he makes the Veda fourfold, to adapt it to their capacities; and the bodily form which he assumes, in order to effect that classification, is known by the name of Veda-vyása.‡ Of the different Vyásas in the present Manwantara,¹ and the branches which they have taught, you shall have an account.

Twenty-eight times have the Vedas been arranged, by the great Řishis, in the Vaivaswata Manwantara in the Dwápara age;* and, consequently, eight and twenty Vyásas have passed away; by whom, in their respective periods, the Veda has been divided into four. In the first Dwápara age, the distribution was made by Swayaníbhu (Brahmá) himself; in the second, the arranger of the Veda (Veda-vyása) was Prajapati (or Manu); in the third, Uśanas; in the fourth, Bŗihaspati; in the fifth, Savitrĩ; in the sixth, Mŗityu (Death, or Yama); in the seventh, Indra; in the eighth, Vasishtha; in the ninth, Sáraswata; in the tenth, Tridhāman; in the eleventh, Trivŗishan;† (in the twelfth), Bharadvāja;‡ in the thirteenth, Antariksha; in the fourteenth, Vapŗivan;§ in the fifteenth, Trayyāruña;²||

यस्मिन्नन्तरे ये ये व्यासास्तांस्तान्निबोध मे ।

But this is inconsistent with what follows, in which the enumeration is confined to the Vaivaswata Manwantara.

² This name occurs as that of one of the kings of the solar † Three MSS. have Trivŗisha; and so has the Kūrma-purāṇa.

‡ I find Bháradwāja in six MSS.; and this lection seems best, as the nineteenth Vyása is called Bharadvāja.

¶ Eight MSS. have Somaśushmāyāna; two, Somaśushmāpāna; others, Somayushmāyana, Somoyushmāpāna, and Somaśushmāñaya. The Translator put "Somaśushmāpāna". My conjectural Saumaśushmāyāna would be descendant of Somaśushma, mentioned in the Śatapatha-brāhmaṇa, XI., IV., 5, and elsewhere.

That the Kūrma-purāṇa was compiled after our Purāṇa had become corrupted, as to the name in question, might be inferred from my MSS., which read:

राजश्रवाश्चैकविंशस्तस्मादूष्मापणः परः ।

 According to the Kūrma-purāṇa, Trīnabindu was the twenty-third Vyāsa, Uśmāpāna being the twenty-second. See note § in the next page.

‡‡ Three MSS. have Śakti. In Vol. I., p. 8, the Translator, after speaking, in a note, of "Śakti, the son of Vasishṭha," and father of Parāśara, calls him "Śakti or Śakti;" touching the first of which, Śakti, I there hastily observe: "This is hardly the name of a male. The right word seems to be Śakti." On this observation Dr. Kern, in his meritorious edition of the Bṛihat-saṁhitā, Preface, p. 31, comments in these words: "F. E. Hall remarks that Śakti is 'hardly the name of a male.' As if a male were intended! Śakti is the heavenly power of Indra-Agni." Assuredly, a male is intended; and Śaktiputra, as Parāśara is called in the Mahābhārata, is not to be rendered, as by Dr. Kern, "the son of strength",—but "son of Śakti,"—unless we consent to regard the attribute of strength as offspring of Vasishṭha. For Parāśara, as son of Śakti, and grandson of Vasishṭha, see the Anukramaṇikā to the Āg-veda, on I., LXV., &c. &c. And the Āg-veda itself—VII., XVIII., 21—makes mention of Parāśara, no less than of Vasishṭha, as if he were anything but a myth. Further, Śakti, as "the heavenly power of Indra-Agni," is, so far as I am at present informed, altogether a novelty.

* This is the reading of eleven of my MSS.; and the other two have Jātūkarīya, which seems to be the lection of the Vāyu-purāṇa. Hence I have displaced Professor Wilson's "Jaratkāru."

worldly illusion; and in whom resides the end of soul (fruition or liberation), through the properties of light and of activity (or goodness and foulness)! He is the refuge of those who are versed in the Sāṅkhya philosophy; of those who have acquired control over their thoughts and passions. He is the invisible, imperishable Brahma; varying in form, invariable in substance; the chief principle, self-engendered; who is said to illuminate the caverns of the heart; who is indivisible, radiant, undecaying, multiform. To that supreme Brahma be, for ever, adoration.

That form of Vāsudeva, who is the same with supreme spirit, which is Brahma, and which, although diversified as threefold, is identical, is the lord who is conceived, by those that contemplate variety in creation, to be distinct in all creatures. He, composed of the Rig-, Sáma-, and Yajur-Vedas, is, at the same time, their essence, as he is the soul of all embodied spirits. He, distinguished as consisting of the Vedas, creates the Vedas, and divides them, by many subdivisions, into branches: he is the author* of those branches: he is those aggregated branches: for he, the eternal lord, is the essence of true knowledge.¹†

Division of the Veda, in the last Dwápara age, by the Vyása Kṛishná Dwaipáyana. Paila made reader of the R̥ich; Vaiśam-páyana, of the Yajus; Jaimini, of the Sáman; and Sumantu, of the Atharvan. The paśu of this nomenclature is, more usually, called paśubandha or nirūdhapaśubandha. It is not to be confounded with the aśwamedha. To the five sacrifices in question, remarks the commentator, if we add the five mentioned in the Gṛihya, the ten of the text are completed. These five others—the maháyajnas of the Sāmaveda ritual—are said, in Áśáditya's Karmapradipabhāṣya, to be the bhūtayajna, manushyayajna, pitṛiyajna, devayajna, and brahmayajna. age, my son Vyása separated the four portions of the Veda into four (Vedas). In the same manner as the Vedas were arranged by him, as Veda-vyása, so were they divided, (in former periods), by all the (preceding) Vyásas, and by myself; and the branches into which they were subdivided by him were the same into which they had been distributed in every aggregate of the four ages.* Know, Maitreya, the Vyása called Kṛishná Dwaipáyana to be the deity† Náráyana: for who else on this earth could have composed the Mahábhárata?¹ Into what portions the Vedas were arranged by my magnanimous son, in the Dwápara age, you shall hear.

When Vyása was enjoined, by Brahmá, to arrange the Vedas in different books, he took four persons, well read in those works, as his disciples. He appointed Paila reader of the Ríg-;² Vaiśampáyana, of

² Or, rather, 'he took Paila as teacher.' The expression is: Rígvedaśrávakaṁ Pailaṁ jagráha sa mahámuniḥ:

ऋग्वेदश्रावकं पैलं जग्राह स महामुनिः ।

Śrávaka means, properly, 'he who causes to hear,' 'a lecturer,' 'a preacher;' although, as in the case of its applicability to the laity of the Buddhists and Jainas, it denotes a disciple. The commentator, however, observes, that the text is sometimes read ऋग्वेदपारगं,† 'one who had gone through the Ríg-veda.'

* Yuga.

† Prabhu.

‡ But the more ordinary reading is the one found in the Váyu-purána, from which work our text seems to be taken, largely, hereabouts.

the Yajur-; and 'Jaimini, of the Sāma-veda: and Sumantu, who was conversant with the Atharva-veda,* was also the disciple of the learned Vyása. He also took Síta, who was named Lomaharshaña,† as his pupil in historical and legendary traditions.^{1‡}

So, in the preceding verse, it is said: 'He took four persons, well read in the Vedas, as his disciples:'

अथ शिष्यान्स जग्राह चतुरो वेदपारगान् ।

And again it is said: 'Sumantu, conversant with the Atharva-veda, was his disciple:'

* * * * * तथैवाथर्ववेदवित् ।

सुसन्तुस्तस्य शिष्योऽभूद्वेदव्यासस्य धीमतः ॥

It is clear, therefore, that the Vedas were known, as distinct works, before Kṛishṇa Dwaipáyana; and it is difficult to understand how he earned his title of arranger, or Vyása. At any rate, in undertaking to give order to the prayers and hymns of which the Vedas consist, Paila and the others were rather his coadjutors than disciples; and it seems probable, that the tradition records the first establishment of a school, of which the Vyása was the head, and the other persons named were the teachers.

¹ The Itihása and Purāṇas; understanding, by the former, legendary and traditional narratives. It is usually supposed, that, by the Itihása, the Mahābhārata is especially meant. But, although this poem is ascribed to Kṛishṇa Dwaipáyana, the recitation of it is not attributed to his pupil, Romaharshaña or Lomaharshaña:

* The Saṁhitās thus disposed of are said, in the Bhāgavata-purāṇa, XII., VI., 52, 53, to be called, respectively, the Bahwṛichá, the Nigada, the Chhandoga, and the Atharvāngirasi.

This statement occurs in the passage referred to in Vol. I., Preface, p. XLIV.

† All my MSS. have Romaharshaña. Also see p. 64, 65, infra.

‡ This chapter, thus far, will be found retranslated in Original Sanskrit Texts, Part III., pp. 21, 22.

There was but one Yajur-veda; but, dividing this into four parts, Vyása instituted the sacrificial rite that is administered by four kinds of priests: in which it was the duty of the Adhwaryu to recite the prayers (Yajusas,—or direct the ceremony); of the Hotrí, to repeat the hymns (Ríchas); of the Udgátří, to chant other hymns (Sámans); and, of the Brahman, to pronounce the formulæ called Atharvans. Then the Muni, having collected together the hymns called Ríchas, compiled the Ríg-veda; with the prayers and directions termed Yajusas he formed the Yajur-veda; with those called Sámans, the Sáma-veda; and with the Atharvans he composed the rules of all the ceremonies suited to kings, and the function of the Brahman agreeably to practice.^{1*} it was first narrated by Vaiśampáyana, and, after him, by Sauti, the son of Lomaharshaña.

¹ From this account, which is repeated in the Váyu Puráña, it appears, that the original Veda was the Yajus, or, in other words, was a miscellaneous body of precepts, formulæ, prayers, and hymns, for sacrificial ceremonies; Yajus being derived, by the grammarians, from Yaj (यज्), 'to worship.' The derivation of the Váyu Puráña, however, is from Yuj, 'to join,' 'to employ;' the formulæ being those especially applied to sacrificial rite, or set apart, for that purpose, from the general collection:

यच्छिष्टं च यजुर्वेदे तेन यज्ञमथायुजत् ।

युञ्जानः स यजुर्वेद इति शास्त्रविनिश्चयः ॥

Again:

प्रयुज्यते ह्यश्वमेधस्तेन वा युज्यते तु सः ।

The commentator on the text, however, citing the former of these

* Yathá-sthiti, 'according to a fixed rule.'

This vast original tree of the Vedas, having been divided, by him, into four principal stems, soon branched out into an extensive forest. In the first place, Paila divided the Āg-veda, and gave the two Saṁhitās (or collections of hymns) to Indrapramati* and to Bāshkali.† Bāshkali¹‡ subdivided his Saṁhitā into four, which he gave to his disciples,§ Baudhya, passages from the Vāyu, reads it:

याजनाद्वि यजुर्वेद इति शास्त्रस्य निश्चयः । confining the derivation to Yaj, 'to worship.' The concluding passage, relating to the Atharvan, refers, in regard to regal ceremonies, to those of expiation, Śanti, &c. The function of the Brahman (ब्रह्मत्वं * यथास्थिति) is not explained; but, from the preceding specification of the four orders of priests who repeat, at sacrifices, portions of the several Vedas, it relates to the office of the one that is termed, specifically, the Brahman. So the Vāyu has

ब्रह्मत्वमकारोद्यत्ते वेदेनाथर्वणेन तु ।

'He constituted the function of the Brahman at sacrifices, with the Atharva-veda.

¹ Both in our text, and in that of the Vāyu, this name occurs both Bāshkala and Bāshkali. Mr. Colebrooke writes it Bāhkala and Bāhkali. || Asiatic Researches, Vol. VIII., p. 374. ¶

* Two of my MSS. have, here and below, Indrapramiti, a reading of no value.

† My MSS. all here give Bāshkala. But see p. 49, note §, infra.

‡ Two MSS. here have Bāshkala.

§ They are called, in the Vāyu-purāṇa, Bodhya, Agnināvara—in three MSS., by corruption, perhaps, of the Agnimāthara of two others,—Pārāśara, and Yājñavalkya. The Bhāgavata-purāṇa, XII., VI., 55, has Bodhya, Yājñavalkya, Pārāśara, and Agnimitra.

Agnimáthara,* Yájnavalkya,† and Parásara; and they taught these secondary shoots from the primitive branch. Indrapramati imparted his Saṁhitá to his son Máńđukeya;‡ and it thence descended through successive generations, as well as disciples.¹§ Vedamitra, (called also) Śákalya,|| studied the same Saṁhitá; but he divided it into five Saṁhitás, which he distributed amongst as many disciples, named, severally, Mudgala,

¹ The Váyu supplies the detail. Máńđukeya, or, as one copy writes, Márkańdeya,¶ taught the Saṁhitá to his son Satyasra-vas; he, to his son Satyahita; and he, to his son Satyaśrí. The latter had three pupils: Śákalya, also called Devamitra (sic in MS.); Rathántara;†† and another Báshkali, called also Bhára-dwája. The Váyu has a legend of Śákalya's death, in consequence of his being defeated, by Yájnavalkya, in a disputation at a sacrifice celebrated by Janaka.

* Agnimáchara, the lection of two MSS., and Agnimátura, that of one, scarcely deserve noting.

† Professor Wilson had "Yajnavalka".

‡ The Translator put "Mańđukeya", as the name is written in five of my thirteen MSS. See III., 8, of the Prátiśákhya of the Rígveda, edited by M. Regnier.

§ तस्य शिष्यप्रशिष्येभ्यः पुत्रशिष्यात्क्रमादयौ ।

|| According to the Bhágavata-purána, XII., VI., 57, as explained by Śrídharma, Śákalya was son of Máńđukeya.

¶ This is the reading of all the copies of the Váyu-purána known to me.

 And so reads the Bhágavata-purána, XII., VI., 56.

As the Vishnú-purána gives वेदमित्रस्तु शाकल्यः, so the Váyu-purána gives देवमित्रस्तु शाकल्यः; and we here have, probably, only an epithet of Śákalya, or, at most, his secondary appellation.

(Nirukta), constituting a fourth.² The three Saṁhitás

Mátsya, ¶ Śaiśireya.

² The commentator, who is here followed by Mr. Colebrooke, states, that he was a pupil of Indrapramati; but, from the Váyu, it appears, that Śákápúrñi was another name of Rathántara, the pupil of Satyaśrí, the author of three Saṁhitás and a Nirukta (or glossary); whence Mr. Colebrooke supposes him the same with Yáska. Asiatic Researches, Vol. VIII., p. 375. It is highly probable, that the text of the Váyu may be made to correct that of the Vishnú, in this place, which is inaccurate, notwithstanding the copies agree. They read:

संहितान्नितयं चक्रे शाकपूर्णिरथेतरम् †† ।
निरुक्तमकरोत्तद्वच्चतुर्थं मुनिसत्तम ॥

* Probably it was from being misled by a smudged ख, that Professor Wilson deciphered “Goswalu”, which I have corrected. Five of my MSS. have the word in the text; two corrupt it into Gokkala; one, into Yo-khalu; and four give Gomukha; one, Gálava. The Bhāgavata-purāṇa, XII., VI., 57, has Gokbalya. See, further, Professor Max Müller’s Ancient Sanskrit Literature, p. 135, note 2, and p. 368, note 6.

† A single MS. has Śankha.

‡ Thus in four of my MSS., while the other nine have Śákápúñi.

Professor Max Müller—Ancient Sanskrit Literature, p. 153, note—asserts, that “there can be no doubt that Śákápúrñi is the same name as Śákápúñi.” The former has much the air of being a corruption of the latter, due to popular etymology. The MSS. of the Váyu-purāṇa almost everywhere have Śákápúñi; and so has Yáska.

§ See note †† in this page.

|| Two MSS. have Kháliya; others, Khálāya, Khalāya, and Swáloya.

¶ All my MSS. give Matsya.

 Or Miscellaneous Essays, Vol. I., p. 15.

Professor Roth—Nirukta, p. 222—points out, that Śákápúñi is quoted by Yáska. The former cannot, therefore, be identical with the latter.

†† The bulk of MSS. at my disposal read शाकपूर्णिरथेतरः; and the were given to his three pupils, Krauncha, Vaitálaki,*

Here, Śákapúruir atha-itaram is the necessary construction; but quere, if it should not be Śákapúruí Rathántarahí. The parallel passage in the Váyu is:

प्रोवाच संहितास्त्रिः शाकपूर्णरथान्तरः† ।

निरुक्तं च पुनश्चक्रे चतुर्थं द्विजसत्तमाः ॥

Now, in describing the pupils of Satyaśrí, Rathántara was named clearly enough:

शाकल्यः प्रथमस्तेषां तस्मादन्यो रथान्तरः‡ ।

वाष्कलिश्च भारद्वाज इति शाखाप्रवर्तकाः ॥§

In another passage it would seem to be implied, that this Báshkali was the author of the Saṁhitás; and Rathántara, of the Nirukta only:

वाष्कलिश्च भारद्वाजस्त्रिः प्रोवाच संहिताः ।

रथान्तरो ॥ निरुक्तं च पुनश्चक्रे चतुर्थकम् ॥ resulting sense is: "Now, another, Śákapúruí, made a triad of Saṁhitás, and made, likewise, a glossary, for a fourth work." The fact that the forementioned lection, with its awkwardly introduced 'now, another,' is the more ordinary one, lends considerable support to Professor Wilson's suggestion, that the text is here depraved.

* Bad readings are: Vaitálakí, Vaitálíkí, Tálukí, and Paitálakí; each in one manuscript.

† All my MSS. here give रथीतरः. One of Professor Wilson's has शाकपूर्णरथन्तरः (sic).

‡ Such is, here, the prevailing lection: but रथीतरः occurs, also.

॥ रथीतरः is the reading here, in all my five MSS., and so in every one of Professor Wilson's.

Rathántara is, without question, corrupted from Rathítara. As शाकपूर्णरथीतरः, the reading of every one of my MSS.,—see note †, above—is an all but impossible compound name, and as the person intended is called, elsewhere in the Váyu-purána, Rathítara simply, we must read शाकपूर्णी रथीतरः, 'Śákapúruí, that is to say, Rathítara.' Śákapúruí thus comes out a patronymic of Śákapúrua,—a fact hitherto unnoticed, I believe. See Páṇini, IV., I., 95. In two of the three passages adduced, above, and Balāka;* and a fourth, (thence named) Nirukta-

However this may be, his being the author of the Nirukta identifies him with Śākapūrṇi, and makes it likely, that the two names should come in juxtaposition, in our text, as well as in the Vāyu. It must be admitted, however, that there are some rather inexplicable repetitions in the part of the Vāyu where this account occurs, although two copies agree in the reading. That a portion of the Vedas goes by the name of Rathantara† we have seen (Vol. I., p. 84); but, as far as is yet known, the name is confined to different prayers or hymns of the Ūhya Gāna of the Sāma-veda. The text of the Vishnū also admits of a different explanation regarding the work of Śākapūrṇi; and, instead of a threefold division of the original, the passage may mean, that he composed a third Saṁhitā.‡ So Mr. Colebrooke says: “the Vishnū purāṇa omits them [the Śākhās of Āśwalāyana from the Vāyu-purāṇa, we find, similarly, mention of ‘Bāshkali, Bhāradwāja’, i. e., sprung from Bharadwāja.

We are, then, to understand, that one and the same person is referred to in the Bṛihaddevatā, where it speaks of Śākapūrṇi and of Rathantara. See Indische Studien, Vol. I., p. 105.

Of the exceedingly rare work just named there is a MS. in the Bodleian Library, wittingly misrepresented, in Dr. Aufrecht’s Catalogue, as the gift of Mr. William Walker.

* Instead of this, the Bhāgavata-purāṇa, XII., VI., 58, says, that Jātukarīya, disciple of Śākalya, digested a Saṁhitā and a Nirukta, and gave them to his disciples, Balāka, Paija, Vaitāla, and Viraja. The commentator explains that he divided his Saṁhitā into three.

One Jātukarīya succeeded, as a teacher, Yāska. Bṛihad-āranyaka Upanishad, II., VI., 3; IV., VI., 3.

† For the passage so called, see Vol. II., p. 343; supplementary note on p. 295, l. 9, ibid.

‡ संहितात्रितयं, the reading of all my MSS., and also, apparently, of all seen by the Translator, can mean, in good Sanskrit, only ‘three Saṁhitās’,—not ‘third Saṁhitā’. It would be interesting to know whether Colebrooke was acquainted with a different lection; as he very rarely trips in a matter of grammar. See Pāṇini, V., II., 43.

Divisions of the Yajur-veda. Story of Yájnavalkya: forced to give up what he has learned: picked up by others, forming the Taittiríya-yajus. Yájnavalkya worships the sun, who communicates to him the Vájasaneyi-yajus.

PARÁŚARA.—Of the tree of the Yajur-veda there are twenty-seven branches, which Vaiśampáyana, the pupil of Vyása, compiled, and taught to (as many) disciples.¹ Amongst these, Yájnavalkya, the

¹ The Váyu divides these into three classes, containing, each, nine, and discriminated as northern, middle and eastern:

उदीच्या मध्यदेशाश्च प्राच्याश्चैव पृथग्विधाः ।

Of these the chiefs were, severally, Śyámáyani, Áruṇi, and Ánalavi (or Álambi*). With some inconsistency, however, the same authority states, that Vaiśampáyana composed, and gave to his disciples, eighty-six Samhítas.†

* My MSS. have this reading.

† The Váyu-purána declares:

वैशम्पायनगोत्रोऽसौ यजुर्वदं व्यकल्पयत् ।
षडशीतिस्तु येनोक्ता संहिता यजुषां शुभाः ॥
शिष्येभ्यः प्रददौ ताश्च जगृह्णस्ते विधानतः ।

सर्वेषामेव तेषां वै त्रिधा भेदाः प्रकीर्तिताः ।
त्रिधा भेदास्तु ते प्रोक्ता भेदेऽस्मिन्नवमे शुभे ॥

Then follows the line quoted above, and the names of the disciples, Śyámáyani, &c.

These verses are thus edited, from Professor Wilson's MSS., in Dr. Aufrecht's Catalogus, &c., p. 55; and my five copies of the Váyu-purána are of no help towards mending them into something probable. The passage, as it stands, is, in part, ungrammatical and unintelligible; and it would be venturesome to guess at its full meaning, in its unamended state.

son of Brahmarāta,* was distinguished for piety and obedience to his preceptor.

It had been formerly agreed, by the Munis, that any one of them who, at a certain time, did not join an assembly held on mount Meru should incur the guilt of killing a Brahman within a period of seven nights.¹ Vaiśampāyana alone failed to keep the appointment, and, consequently, killed, by an accidental kick with his foot, the child of his sister. He then addressed his scholars, and desired them to perform the penance expiatory of Brahmanicide, on his behalf. Without any hesitation,† Yājñavalkya refused, and said: "How shall I engage in penance with these miserable and inefficient Brahmans?"‡ On which, his Guru, being incensed, commanded him to relinquish all that he had learned from him. "You speak contemptuously," he observed, "of these young Brahmans: but of what use is a disciple who disobeys my commands?" "I spoke," replied Yājñavalkya, "in perfect faith:§ but,

¹ The parallel passage in the Vāyu rather implies, that the agreement was to meet within seven nights:

ततस्ते सगणाः सर्वे वैशम्पायनवर्जिताः ।

प्रययुः सप्तरात्रेण यत्र संधिः कृतोऽभवत् ॥

* One MS. has Devarāta; and so reads the Bhāgavata-purāṇa, XII., VI., 64. Devarāta would be a violent synonym of Brahmarāta. Moreover, Daivarāti—patronymic of Devarāta—is a name of Janaka, Yājñavalkya's patron.

† These words should end the preceding sentence. The original runs:

as to what I have read from you, I have had enough: it is no more than this—" (acting as if he would eject it from his stomach); when he brought up the texts of the Yajus, in substance stained with blood. He then departed. The other scholars of Vaiśampāyana, transforming themselves to partridges (Tittiri), picked up the texts which he had disgorged, and which, from that circumstance, were called Taittirīya;¹ and the disciples were called the Charaka professors* of the Ya-

. ¹ Also called the Black Yajus. No notice of this legend, as Mr. Colebrooke observes (Asiatic Researches, Vol. VIII., p. 376†), occurs in the Veda itself; and the term Taittirīya is more rationally accounted for in the Anukramaṇī, or Index, of the Black Yajus. It is there said, that Vaiśampāyana taught it to Yáska, who taught it to Tittiri, who, also, became a teacher; whence the term Taittirīya: for a grammatical rule explains it to mean, 'The Taittirīyas are those who read what was said or repeated by Tittiri:' तित्तिरिणा प्रोक्तमधीयते । तैत्तिरीयाः । Pāṇini, IV., III., 102. The legend, then, appears to be nothing more than a Paurāṇik invention, suggested by the equivocal sense of Tittiri, a proper name, or a partridge.‡ Much of the mythos of the Hindus, and, obviously, of that of the Greeks and Romans, originates in this source. It was not confined, at least amongst the former, to the case that Creuzer specifies,—“Telle ou telle expression cessa d'être comprise, et l'on inventa des mythes pour éclaircir ces malentendus,”—but was wilfully perpetrated, even where the word was understood, when it afforded a favourable opportunity for a fable. It may be suspected, in the present instance, that the legend is posterior, not only to the Veda, but to the grammatical rule; or it would have furnished Pāṇini with a different etymology.

CHAPTER VI.

Divisions of the Sáma-veda: of the Atharva-veda. Four Pauránik Saṁhitás. Names of the eighteen Puráṇas. Branches of knowledge. Classes of Rishis.

YOU shall now hear, Maitreya, how Jaimini, the pupil of Vyása, divided the branches of the Sáma-veda. The son of Jaimini was Sumantu; and his son was Sukarman; who, both, studied the same Saṁhitá under Jaimini¹. The latter* composed the Sáhasra Saṁhitá (or compilation of a thousand hymns, &c.), which he taught to two disciples, Hiraṇyanábha,—also named Kauśalya† (or, of Kośala),—and Paushyinji^{2,‡}. Fifteen disciples (of the latter) were the authors of as many Saṁhitás: they were called the northern chanters of

² Some copies read Paushpinji. The Váyu agrees with our text, but alludes to a legend of Sukarman having first taught a thousand disciples; but they were, all, killed by Indra, for reading on an unlawful day, or one when sacred study is prohibited.

* Sukarman, namely.

† One of my MSS. has Kaiśilya. The Váyu-puráṇa reads Kauśilya, which looks less likely than Kauśalya to be correct.

‡ All my MSS. have Paushpinji. Paushyinji, a reading of no account, occurs in some copies of the Váyu-puráṇa. The Bhāgavata-puráṇa—see p. 59, note *, infra,—has Paushpanji, a patronymic of Pushpanja. The meaning of Paushpinji is not evident; but it is, probably, the original name.

§ See p. 60, note ||, infra.

हिरण्यनाभात्तावत्यः संहिता यैर्द्विजोत्तमैः ।
गृहीतास्तेऽपि चोच्यन्ते पण्डितैः प्राच्यसामगाः ॥

The corresponding passage of the Bhāgavata-purāṇa,—XII., VI., 76–78,—runs thus:

सुकर्मा चापि तच्छिष्यः सामवेदतरोर्महान् ।
साहस्रं संहिताभेदं चक्रे साम्नां ततो द्विजः ॥
हिरण्यनाभः कौशिल्यः पौष्पिजिश्च सुकर्मणः ।

उदीच्याः सामगाः शिष्या आसन्पञ्च शतानि वै ।
पौष्पञ्ज्यावन्त्ययोश्चापि कांश्चित्प्राच्यान्प्रचक्षते ॥

Śrīdhara explains this to mean, that Hiraṇyanābha, Paushtpanji, and Āvantya had, between them, five hundred disciples, first called northern, and, some of them, in time, eastern.

It seems possible that the name Āvantya grew out of a misreading of tāvatyak,—which some of my MSS. corrupt into tāvantyak,—and the suggestion of Kauśalya; both which words stand only two lines apart, in the verses quoted from the Vishṇu-purāṇa. Āvantya does not appear in the Vāyu-purāṇa, an older work than either the Vishṇu or the Bhāgavata:

तस्य शिष्योऽभवद्दीमान्पौष्पिजिर्द्विजसत्तमाः ।
हिरण्यनाभः कौशिल्यो द्वितीयोऽभून्नराधिपः ॥
अध्यापयत्तु पौष्पिजिः शहस्रार्धं तु संहिताः ।

शतानि पञ्च कौशिल्यः संहितानां च वीर्यवान् ।
शिष्या हिरण्यनाभस्य स्मृतास्ते प्राच्यसामगाः ॥

Here, distinctly, Paushtpinji is said to have taught half a thousand Saṁhitās; and his disciples were called northerners: Hiraṇyanābha had five hundred Saṁhitās; and his disciples were known as easterlings.

Śrīdhara tries to harmonize with the text he is editing that of the Vishṇu-purāṇa; quoting from it, in place of the fourth verse adduced above:

उदीच्याः सामगाः शिष्यास्तस्य पञ्च शत स्मृताः ।

The reading तस्य is seen, at once, to be incomparably better than

Hiraṇyanābha, were termed the eastern chanters of the Sāman, founding an equal number of schools. Lokākshi,* Kuthumi,† Kushidin,‡ and Lāngali were the pupils of Paushyinji; and by them and their disciples many other branches were formed: whilst another scholar of Hiraṇyanābha, named Kṛiti,§ taught twenty-four Saṁhitās to (as many) pupils; and by them, again, was the Sāma-veda divided into numerous branches.¹||

¹ The Vāyu specifies many more names than the Vishṇu; but the list is rather confused. Amongst the descendants of those named in the text, Rāyānaniya (or Rāṇānaniya), the son of Lokākshi, is the author of a Saṁhitā still extant; Saumitri, his son, was the author of three Saṁhitās: Pārāsara, the son of Kuthumi, compiled and taught six Saṁhitās: and Śāligotra, a son तेभ्यः; and 'five hundred', as the Vāyu-purāṇa shows, has to displace "fifteen". By the ordinary text, only thirty Saṁhitās are disposed of, out of the thousand. Both these better lections are in a single one of my thirteen copies of the Vishṇu-purāṇa; but the commentary adopts, uninquiringly, and without demur, what are now made out to be corruptions.

* Three MSS. have Laugākshi; one has Laukākshi. The former of these readings seems to be the best of all.

† Scarcely worthy of mention are the variants Kuthami and Kuśumi.

‡ This is the prevailing lection; while three MSS. have Kusidin; two, Kuśidi; two, Kuchidi; one, Kuśādi. The Vāyu-purāṇa seems to give Kuśiti, in some MSS.; in others, Kuśin.

§ Two MSS. exhibit Kṛita; and this, according to the copies of it known to me, is the name, in the Vāyu-purāṇa.

|| The history of the transmission of the Sāmaveda is briefly told as follows, in the Bhāgavata-purāṇa, XII., VI., 75—80. Jaimini had a son, Sumantu, whose son was Sunwat; and to each of them he gave a Saṁhitā. Sukarman, another disciple of Jaimini, divided the Sāma-veda into a thousand parts. His disciples were Hiraṇyanābha, Paushpanji, and Āvantya; and their disciples were, in all, five hundred.

I will now give you an account of the Samhitás of the Atharva-veda. The illustrious Muni Sumantu taught this Veda to his pupil Kabandha, who made it twofold, and communicated the two portions to Devadarśa* and to Pathya. The disciples of Devadarśa were Maudga,† Brahmabali, Śaulkāyani,‡ and Pippaláof Lángali, established, also, six schools. § Kṛiti was of royal descent:

ततो हिरण्यनाभस्य कृतिः शिष्यो नृपात्मजः ।

He and Paushyinjī were the two most eminent teachers of the Sáma-veda.

Paushpanji's disciples, to-wit, Laugákshi, Mángali, Kulya, Kuśida, and Kukshi, received, each, a hundred Samhitás; Hirañyanábha's disciple, Kṛita, twenty-four; and Ávantya's disciples, the rest.

We are not told who, or how many, these last were. They must have taken four hundred and seventy-six Samhitás, to make up the thousand into which the Sámaveda was partitioned by Sukarman.

* The Váyu-purána has Vedasparśa. Śrīdhara, commenting on the Bhāgavata-purána, XII., VII., 1, quotes a portion of our text, and reads Vedadarśa.

† One MS. has Maunda. The name, in the Váyu-purána, is Moda.

‡ One MS. has Śaulkyāyani.

§ I do not find that Rāñyāniya is called son of Lokákshi: he seems to have been only his disciple. Nor is Saumitri represented as son of Rāñyāniya; and no writings are credited to him. Rāñyāniyi—son of Rāñyāniya—and he are merely stated to have been conversant with the Sámaveda. The Sanskrit runs:

राणायनीयिः सौमित्रिः सामवेदविशारदौ ॥

Again, instead of "Páraśara, the son of Kuthumi," I meet with Páraśarya Kauthuma and with Kauthuma Páraśarya, which perhaps intend Páraśarya, son of Kuthumi. Once more, the kinship of Lángali and Śálihotra,—a better reading than Śáligotra—is left unspecified; and each of them, we are told, published six Samhitás:

लाङ्गलिः शालिहोत्रस्तु षड्विंशोवाच संहिताः ।

As to this line, at least, my MSS. of the Váyu-purána must differ from those which were consulted by Professor Wilson.

da.* Pathya had three pupils, Jājali, Kumudādi,† and Śaunaka: and by all these were separate branches instituted. Śaunaka, having divided his Saṁhitā into two, gave one to Babhru, and the other to Saindhavāyana; and from them sprang two schools, the Saindhavas and the Munjakeśas.¹‡ The principal subjects of difference§ in the Saṁhitās of the Atharva-veda

¹ According to the commentator, Munjakeśa is another name for Babhru; but the Vāyu seems to consider him as the pupil of Saindhava: but the text is corrupt:

सैन्धवो मुञ्जकेशाय भिन्नां चास्य द्विधा पुनः । ॥

* Pishpalāda, though occurring in five of my MSS., and in some copies of the Vāyu-purāṇa, can be nothing but a clerical error.

† Kumudāhi is the reading of two MSS.; Kumudāri, of one.

‡ The account of the Atharvaveda given in the Bhāgavata-purāṇa, XII., VII., 1—3, is, in substance, this. Sumantu had two disciples, Pathya and Vedadarśa. The disciples of the latter were Śaulkāyani, Brahmbali, Modosha, and Paippalāyani; and those of the former were Kumuda, Śunaka, and Jājali. Śunaka had two disciples, Babhru—son of Angiras,—and Saindhavāyana; and these were succeeded by the Sāvarīyas and others.

I have availed myself of Śankara's supplementations, here and in note ॥ in p. 60, supra.

One MS. has, for Modosha, Modāsha; another, Mediya. All my MSS., and likewise the printed editions, have the ungrammatical Pippalāyani, which I have corrected to Paippalāyani. The Bhāgavata-kathā-saṅgraha gives, in my incorrect copies of it, Śaunakāyani, Brahmbali, Maudgalādi, and Pippalāyani, as the disciples of Vedadarśa.

§ "Subjects of difference" is the rendering of vikalpakaḥ, 'divisions.'

॥ Just before this line we read, almost in the words of the Vishnu-purāṇa, as follows:

श्रीनकस्तु द्विधा कृत्वा ददावेकं तु बभुवे ।

द्वितीयां संहितां धीमान्सैन्धवायनसंज्ञिते ॥

It is now patent why the Translator pronounced the text corrupt. Saindhavāyana and Saindhava cannot denominate the same teacher. The former must have been a descendant of the latter.

are the five Kalpas (or ceremonials): the Nakshatra Kalpa, (or rules for worshipping the planets); the Vaitána (Kalpa), (or rules for oblations, according to the Vedas generally); the Saṁhitá (Kalpa), (or rules for sacrifices, according to different schools); the Ángirasa (Kalpa), (incantations and prayers for the destruction of foes and the like); and the Śánti Kalpa, (or prayers for averting evil).^{1*}

Accomplished in the purport of the Puráñas, Vyása compiled a Pauráñik Saṁhitá, consisting of historical and legendary traditions, prayers and hymns, and sacred chronology.^{2†} He had a distinguished disciple, ¹ The Váyu has an enumeration of the verses contained in the different Vedas; but it is very indistinctly given, in many respects, especially as regards the Yajus. The Řich is said to comprise 8,600 Řichas: the Yajus, as originally compiled by Vyása, 12,000; of which the Vájasaneyi contains 1,900 Řichas and 7,600 Bráhmañas; the Charaka portion contains 6,026 stanzas; and, consequently, the whole exceeds 12,000 verses. The stanzas of the Sáman are said to be 8,014; and those of the Atharvan, 5,980. Mr. Colebrooke‡ states the verses of the whole Yajus to be 1,987; of the Śatapatha§ Bráhmaña of the same Veda, 7,624; and, of the Atharvan, 6,015.

* One MS. has, here and below, Mitráyu, a reading which is seen in some copies of the Váyu-purāna, as well.

† In one MS. is Śámśapáyani.

‡ One MS. has Křítabraña: but the reading is, perhaps, to be rejected. Akřítabraña, however, renders the line which it begins hypermetrical:

अकृतव्रणोऽथ सावर्णिः षड्विधास्तस्य चाभवन् ।

What is conclusive,—if the MSS. are not corrupt,—the Váyu-purāna has the line

आवेयः सुमतिर्धीमान्काश्यपो ह्यकृतव्रणः ।

It is proved hereby, moreover, that Akřítabraña sprang from Káśyapa. Sumati is here called descendant of Atri, too.

For the reading Křítavrata, see note || in this page.

§ In the Sanskrit, Káśyapa is not named here, but in the following sentence, which the translation abridges.

|| “Six persons received the Purāñas from Vyása, and were his pupils. Their names are Súta, Lomaharsha, Sumati, Maitreya, Śímśapáyana, and Súvarñi.” The Translator thus renders a passage from the Agni-purāna, in the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. I., p. 84. Compare Professor Wilson’s Essays, Analytical, Critical, &c., Vol. I., p. 88.

Burnouf—in his edition of the Bhāgavata-purāna, Vol. I., Preface, pp. XXXIX., XL.—quotes the original of the passage thus rendered, and translates and annotates it, as follows:

प्राप्य व्यासात्पुराणादि सूतो वै लोमहर्षणः ।

Les Purâṇas, dont le Brâhma est le premier, sont au nombre de dix-huit; c'est la science même qui n'est autre que Hari. En effet, dans le grand Purâṇa nommé l'Âgnêya, Hari existe sous la forme de la science.'

"M. Wilson * * * a cité ce texte qu'il regarde comme remarquable en ce qui touche à la question de l'origine des Purâṇas. Mais soit qu'il ait en sous les yeux un texte différent du nôtre, soit que quelque faute d'impression se soit glissée dans son travail, il fait deux personnages de Sûta et de Lômaharchaṇa, et il ne nomme pas Kṛitavrata. Au lieu de Çāṁçapâyana, que donne également le Vâichṇava, M. Wilson lit Sinṣapâyana, comme le Bhâgavata, et Mâitrêya au lieu du Mitrâyu ou Mitrâyu du Vâichṇava. Ces différences viennent probablement de l'inattention des copistes qui ont compilé les index dont s'est servi M. Wilson pour ses analyses; quelle qu'en soit d'ailleurs la cause, je crois plus sûr de m'en tenir au texte que j'ai sous les yeux, que de faire deux personnages de Sûta et de Lômaharchaṇa. Mais je dois en même temps remarquer le peu d'accord qui se trouve entre les trois autorités originales dont je rapporte le témoignage, le Bhâgavata, le Vâichṇava et l'Âgnêya. Les noms de Trayyârûhi et de Hârîta, donnés par le Bhâgavata, ne reparaissent plus dans le Vâichṇava ni dans l'Âgnêya; d'autre part, le Sumati, l'Agnivartchas et le Mitrâyu de ces deux derniers ouvrages ne se trouvent pas dans le Bhâgavata. La liste de ce dernier Purâṇa contient d'ailleurs un vice radical, qui consiste à faire deux personnages de Kaçyapa (qu'il faut lire, comme je vais le dire plus bas, Kâçyapa), et d'Akṛitavraṇa. Quand on pourra comparer un plus grand nombre de textes indiens, et surtout de commentaires, peut-être résoudra-t-on ces difficultés, comme on peut le faire en ce qui touche Akṛitavraṇa, qu'un commentateur nous apprend avoir été surnommé Kâçyapa, à cause sans doute de la famille à laquelle il appartenait; ainsi, le nom de Trayyârûhi, qui est patronymique, cache probablement le nom propre de Sumati ou d'Agnivartchas. Trayyârûhi rappelle le Trayyârûha qui figure, selon Colebrooke, parmi les rois auteurs de quelques hymnes du Rîgvêda (Miscell. Essays, t. I., p. 23); et Hârîta est le nom d'un sage, auteur d'un Dharmaçâstra qui est quelquefois cité par Kullûka Bhaffa, dans son Commentaire sur Manu'', etc.

For Tryarûha, the real Vaidik name, see p. 36, note †, supra; for Âtreya, the patronymic of Sumati, p. 64, note †, supra. According to the Váyu-purána, Bháradwája is Agnivarchas's patronymic; Vasishta, Mitrayu's; and Saumadatti, Sávarñi's.

The originators of the Puránas are thus enumerated in the Bhágavata-purána, XII., VII., 5:

So read, all but consentaneously, five MSS. which I have examined. One of them has Akritavrata, for Akritabrahma; and one has—like the Bhágavata-kathá-sangraha—Śimśapáyana, for Vaisampáyana. Śamśapáyani is the name, in the Váyu-purána.

The Váyu-purána says the same, in effect.

‡ From the commentary: विष्णुपुराणं च क्वचिद्दशसाहस्रं क्वचिदष्टसाहस्रमित्यादिविकल्पेऽप्यत्र षट्साहस्रमेव व्याख्यायते । We learn, from this, that the Vishnú-purána has been variously reputed as consisting of ten thousand stanzas, of eight thousand, and of six thousand. The scholiast accepts the most moderate estimate. It is a great reduction from twenty-three thousand. See Vol. I., Preface, p. XXXIV., note 2, extract from the Matsya-purána.

The Brahmarshis, it is said, are descendants of the five patriarchs who were the founders of races or Gotras of Brahmans; or, Kaśyapa, Vasishtha, Bhṛigu, Angiras, and Atri. The Devarshis are Nara and Nārāyaṇa, the sons of Dharma;‡ the Vālikhilyas,§ who sprang from Kratu;|| Kardama, the son of Pulaha; Kubera, the son of Pulastya¶; Achala, the son of Pratyūsha; Parvata and Nārada, the sons of Kaśyapa. I have, thus, related to you, Maitreya, the circumstances, relating to the Vedas, which you desired to hear. Of what else do you wish to be informed?¹

¹ No notice is taken, here, of a curious legend which is given in the Mahābhārata, in the Gadā Parvan.* It is there said, that, during a great drought, the Brahmans, engrossed by the care of subsistence, neglected the study of the sacred books, and the Vedas were lost. The Ṛishi Sāraswata, alone, being fed with fish by his mother Saraswatī, the personified river so named, kept up his studies, and preserved the Hindu scriptures. At the end of the famine, the Brahmans repaired to him, to be taught; and sixty thousand disciples again acquired a knowledge of the Vedas from Sāraswata. This legend appears to indicate the revival, or, more probably, the introduction, of the Hindu ritual by the race of Brahmans, or the people, called Sāraswata: for, according to the Hindu geographers, it was the name of a nation, as it still is the appellation of a class of Brahmans who chiefly inhabit the Punjab. (Asiatic Researches, Vol. VII., p. 219; † Vol. VIII., pp. 338, 341.) The Sāraswata Brahmans are met with in many parts of India, and are, usually, fair-complexioned, tall, and handsome men. They are classed, in the Jāti mālās, or popular lists of castes, amongst the five Gauda Brahmans, and are divided into ten tribes. They are said, also, to be, especially, the Purohitas or family-priests of the Kshatriya or military castes†;—(see the Jāti málá, printed in Price's Hindee and Hindoostanee Selections, Vol. I., p. 280)—circumstances in harmony with the purport of the legend, and confirmatory of the Sáraswatas of the Punjab having been prominent agents in the establishment of the Hindu religion in India. The holy land of the Hindus, or the primary seat, perhaps, of Brahmanism, has, for one of its boundaries, the Saraswatí river. See Vol. II., p. 142, note 4.

The Translator omitted mention of the sons of Prabhāsa, here classed among the Devarshis, but not named. Prabhāsa was father of Viśwakarma. See Vol. II., p. 24.

Further, the Rājarshis are said to be Aidas, Aikshwākas, and Nābhāgas,—kings sprung from Manu, Vena (?), and Ida.

Note referred to at p. 67, supra.

Burnouf, in his edition of the Bhágavata-purána, Vol. I., Preface, pp. XLIV.—LI., dwells at length on the definition of the term Purána. After citing, from the Śabdakalpadruma, a passage of the Brahmavai-varta-purána, where the topics of a Purána are said to be ten, he translates an extract from the Bhágavata-purána,—XII., VII., 8-19,—in which these topics are enumerated almost in the same manner. Subjoined is his translation, with the original prefixed.

“Écoute, ô Brâhmane (dit Sûta à Çâunaka), en y appliquant ton intelligence, la définition d'un Purâṇa, telle que l'ont donnée les Brahmarshis, d'accord avec les diverses écoles des Vêdas. La création de cet univers et la création distincte, l'existence, la conservation, les intervalles [de chaque Manu], la généalogie, l'histoire des familles postérieures, la destruction, la cause, la délivrance: voilà ce que les savants reconnaissent pour un Purâṇa, ouvrage qui a dix caractères particuliers. D'autres, distinguant les Purâṇas en grands et en petits, disent qu'un [petit] Purâṇa a cinq caractères. On entend par Sarga, création, l'origine du principe dit de l'Intelligence, qui vient du mouvement des qualités qui appartiennent à la Nature, celle du principe de la Personnalité qui est triple et qui sort de l'Intelligence, celle des molécules subtiles, celle des sens et des éléments grossiers. On entend par Visarga, création distincte, l'association de tous ces principes fécondés par Purucha association qui leur rappelle leur ancienne activité; il en résulte tout ce qui se ment comme ce qui ne se ment pas, de même qu'un germe sort d'un autre germe. Par Vṛitti, existence, on entend que les êtres servent à l'existence les uns des autres, ceux qui ne se meuvent pas, à celle de ceux qui se meuvent; mais les moyens qu'a l'homme de soutenir son existence sont, par une suite de sa nature propre, volontaires ou nécessaires. La Rakchâ ou conservation de l'univers, c'est l'action d'Atchyuta (Vichnú) qui descend, à chaque Yuga, dans des formes d'animaux, d'hommes, de Rîchis, de Dêvas, pour anéantir les ennemis du triple Vêda. Par Manvantara, intervalle de chaque Manu, on entend une époque où se trouvent les six espèces d'êtres suivantes: un Manu, des Dêvas, des fils de Manu, des chefs de Suras, des Rîchis, des incarnations partielles de Hari (Vichnú). Par Vaṁśa, généalogie, on entend la succession des rois, nés de Brahmâ, pendant les trois parties de la durée; et par Vaṁśanucharita, histoire des familles postérieures, on entend la conduite de ceux qui ont perpétué les familles de ces rois. Les chantres inspirés nomment Samsthâ, destruction, la dissolution de cet univers qui est de quatre sortes, savoir; Nâimittika, Prâkṛitika, Nitya et Âtyantika, et qui résulte de sa nature propre. Par Hêtu, cause de la création et des autres états de l'univers, on entend l'âme individualisée qui accomplit des actes sous l'influence de l'Avidyâ (l'Ignorance). Cette cause, quelques-uns l'appellent le principe [intelligent] qui s'endort [au temps de la destruction de l'univers au sein de l'Être suprême]; d'autres, le principe [matériel] non développé. On entend par Apâçraya, délivrance, Brahma auquel il appartient d'être présent et absent tout à la fois, pendant que s'accomplissent les fonctions de la vie, de la veille, du sommeil et du sommeil profond, fonctions qui sont l'œuvre de Mâyâ."

This passage, and that from the Brahmavaivarta-purāṇa, before adverted to, are of interest, as evincing the comparatively recent date of those compositions; only five constitutive and characteristic topics of a Purāṇa being recognized by so late writers as the commentators on the Amara-kośa. See Vol. I., Preface, p. VII., where the commentators on Amarasīṃha are inadvertently identified, in respect of their views touching the subject-matters of a Purāṇa, with the vocabularist himself.

CHAPTER VII.

By what means men are exempted from the authority of Yama, as narrated, by Bhíshma, to Nakula. Dialogue between Yama and one of his attendants. Worshippers of Vishnú not subject to Yama. How they are to be known.

MAITREYA.—You have, indeed, related to me, most excellent Brahman, all that I asked of you. But I am desirous to hear one thing which you have not touched on. This universe, composed of seven zones, with its seven subterrestrial regions, and seven spheres,—this whole egg of Brahmá,—is everywhere swarming with living creatures, large or small, with smaller and smallest, and larger and largest; so that there is not the eighth part of an inch in which they do not abound. Now, all these are captives in the chains of acts, and, at the end of their existence, become slaves to the power of Yama, by whom they are sentenced to painful punishments. Released from these inflictions, they are again born in the condition of gods, men, or the like; and, thus, living beings, as the Śástras apprise us, perpetually revolve. Now, the question I have to ask, and which you are so well able to answer, is, by what acts men may free themselves from subjection to Yama.

PARÁSARA. — This question, excellent Muni, was once asked, by Nakula,¹ of his grandfather Bhíshma;

¹ Nakula is one of the Pándava princes, and, consequently, grand-nephew, not grandson, of Bhíshma: he is great grandson of Parásara; and it is rather an anomaly for the latter to cite a conversation in which Nakula formerly bore a part.

and I will repeat to you the reply made by the latter.

Bhīshma said to the prince: "There formerly came, on a visit to me, a friend of mine, a Brahman, from the Kalinga country, who told me that he had once proposed this question to a holy Muni who retained the recollection of his former births, and by whom what was and what will be was accurately told. Being importuned by me, who placed implicit faith in his words, to repeat what that pious personage had imparted to him, he, at last, communicated it to me; and what he related I have never met with elsewhere.

"Having, then, on one occasion, put to him the same question which you have asked, the Kalinga Brahman recalled the story that had been told him by the Muni, —the great mystery that had been revealed to him by the pious sage who remembered his former existence, —a dialogue that occurred between Yama and one of his ministers.

"Yama, beholding one of his servants with his noose in his hand, whispered to him, and said: 'Keep clear of the worshippers of Madhusúdana. I am the lord of all men, the Vaishnávas excepted. I was appointed, by Brahmá,* who is revered by all the immortals, to restrain mankind, and regulate the consequences of good and evil in the universe. But he who obeys Hari, as his spiritual guide, is here independent of me; for Vishnú is of power to govern and control me. As gold is one substance, still, however diversified as bracelets, tiaras,* or ear-rings, so Hari is one and the same, although modified in the forms of gods, animals, and man. As the drops of water, raised, by wind, from the earth, sink into the earth again, when the wind subsides, so the varieties of gods, men, and animals, which have been detached by the agitation† of the qualities, are reunited, when that disturbance ceases, with the eternal. He who, through holy knowledge, diligently adores the lotos-foot of that Hari, who is revered by the gods, is released from all the bonds of sin; and you must avoid him, as you would avoid fire fed with oil.'

"Having heard these injunctions of Yama, the messenger addressed the lord of righteousness, and said: 'Tell me, master, how am I to distinguish the worshipper of Hari, who is the protector of all beings?' Yama replied: 'You are to consider the worshipper of Vishū him who never deviates from the duties prescribed to his caste; who looks with equal indifference upon friend or enemy; who takes nothing (that is not his own), nor injures any being. Know that person of unblemished mind to be a worshipper of Vishū. Know him to be a devout worshipper of Hari, who has placed Janārdana in his pure mind, which has been freed from fascination, and whose soul is undefiled by the soil of the Kali age. Know that excellent man to be a worshipper of Vishū, who, looking upon gold in secret, holds that which is another's wealth but as grass, and devotes all his thoughts to the lord. Pure is he as a mountain of clear crystal: for how can Vishnú abide in the hearts of men with malice, and envy, and other evil passions? The glowing heat of fire abides not in a cluster of the cooling rays of the moon. He who lives pure in thought, free from malice, contented, leading a holy life, feeling tenderness for all creatures, speaking wisely and kindly, humble and sincere, has Vásudeva ever present in his heart. As the young Śála-tree, by its beauty, declares the excellence of the juices which it has imbibed from the earth, so, when the eternal has taken up his abode in the bosom of any one, that man is lovely amidst the beings of this world. Depart, my servant, quickly from those men whose sins have been dispersed by moral and religious merit,¹ whose minds are daily dedicated to the imperceptible deity,* and who are exempt from pride, uncharitableness, and ¹ Or Yama and Niyama. The duties intended by these terms are variously enumerated. The commentator on the text specifies, under the first head, absence of violence or cruelty to other beings (Ahimsá), truth (Satya), honesty (Asteya), chastity (Brahmacharya), and disinterestedness, or non-acceptance of gifts (Aparigraha). Under Niyama are comprehended purity (Śauca), contentment (Santosha), devotion† (Tapas), study of the Vedas (Swádhya), and adoration of the supreme (Íśwara-praídhána).

* "Imperceptible deity" here renders achyuta, on which term see Vol. I., p. 15, note 3.

malice. In the heart in which the divine Hari, who is without beginning or end, abides, armed with a sword, a shell, and a mace, sin cannot remain; for it cannot coexist with that which destroys it: as darkness cannot continue in the world, when the sun is shining. The eternal makes not his abode in the heart of that man who covets another's wealth, who injures living creatures, who speaks harshness and untruth, who is proud of his iniquity, and whose mind is evil. Janár-dana occupies not his thoughts who envies another's prosperity, who calumniates the virtuous, who never sacrifices, nor bestows gifts upon the pious, who is blinded by the property of darkness. That vile wretch is no worshipper of Vishńu, who, through avarice, is unkind to his nearest friends and relations, to his wife, children, parents, and dependants. The brute-like man whose thoughts are evil, who is addicted to unrighteous acts, who ever seeks the society of the wicked, and suffers no day to pass without the perpetration of crime, is no worshipper of Vásudeva. Do you proceed afar off from those in whose hearts Ananta is enshrined; from him whose sanctified understanding conceives the supreme male and ruler, Vásudeva, as one with his votary and with all this world. Avoid those holy persons who are constantly invoking the lotos-eyed Vásudeva, Vishńu, the supporter of the earth, the immortal wielder of the discus and the shell, the asylum of the world. Come not into the sight of him in whose heart the imperishable* soul resides; for he is defended from my power by the discus of his deity: he is designed for another world, (for the heaven of Vishnú).'

* Avyaya. See Vol. I., p. 17., note *.

“‘Such,’ said the Kalinga Brahman, ‘were the instructions communicated by the deity of justice, the son of the Sun, to his servants, as they were repeated, to me, by that holy personage, and as I have related them to you, chief of the house of Kuru’ (Bhíshma). So, also, Nakula, I have faithfully communicated to you all I heard from my pious friend, when he came, from his country of Kalinga, to visit me. I have, thus, explained to you, as was fitting, that there is no protection, in the ocean of the world, except Vishnú; and that the servants and ministers of Yama, the king of the dead himself, and his tortures, are, all, unavailing against one who places his reliance on that divinity.”*

I have, thus, resumed Parásara, related to you what you wished to hear, and what was said by the son of Vivaswat.¹ What else do you wish to hear?

CHAPTER VIII.

How Vishnú is to be worshipped, as related, by Aurva, to Sagara.

Duties of the four castes, severally and in common: also in time of distress.

MAITREYA.—Inform me, venerable teacher, how the supreme deity, the lord of the universe, Vishnú, is worshipped by those who are desirous of overcoming the world; and what advantages are reaped, by men assiduous in his adoration, from the propitiated Govinda.

PARÁŚARA.—The question you have asked was formerly put, by Sagara, to Aurva.¹ I will repeat to you his reply.

¹ Sagara, as we shall see,* was a king of the solar race. Aurva was a sage, the grandson of Bhṛigu.† When the sons

† "In the Mahābhārata, Ādi-parvan, verse 2610, * * * we have the parentage of Aurva thus specified: 'Ārushī, the daughter of Manu, was the wife of this sage [Chyavana, son of Bhṛigu]: the illustrious Aurva was born of her, having separated his mother's thigh.' In the Harivaṃśa, verse 1456, he seems to be identified with Richika, father of Jamadagni; Richika being Aurva, or the son of Ūrva," &c. Original Sanskrit Texts, Part I., pp. 172, 173.

Harivaṃśa.

The name of the father of Jamadagni should, then, be read Ūrva,—not Kuru, nor Ūru, nor Kuśa, as at p. 16, note †, &c., supra.

Sagara, having bowed down before Aurva, the of king Kṛitavīrya persecuted and slew the children of Bhṛigu, to recover the wealth which their father had lavished upon them, they destroyed even the children in the womb. One of the women of the race of Bhṛigu, in order to preserve her embryo, secreted it in her thigh (Ūru), whence the child, on his birth, was named Aurva. From his wrath proceeded a flame, that threatened to destroy the world; but, at the persuasion of his ancestors, he cast it into the ocean, where it abode, with the face of a horse. Aurva was, afterwards, religious preceptor to Sagara, and bestowed upon him the Āgneyāstra,* or fiery weapon, with

* The Translator—in Professor Johnson's Selections from the Mahābhārata, pp. 1, 2,—thus annotates on śl. 5107 of the Ādi-parvan: “Āgneyāstra, ‘the weapon of fire’,—a kind of fire-arms. Fiery arms or rockets were, possibly, employed by the Hindus in remote antiquity, as well as in recent times; whence came the notion of certain mysterious weapons framed of the elements, and to be wielded only by deities and demigods. These make a great figure in the battle-scenes of the Mahābhārata and Rāmāyaṇa, and, to readers who are not Hindus, spoil descriptions which would, else, be not without spirit. For a further account of these weapons, see Translation of the Uttara Rāma Charitra.”

The further account here spoken of is found in Professor Wilson's Specimens of the Hindu Theatre, Vol. I., p. 297, second edition. “These weapons are of a very unintelligible character. Some of them are, occasionally, wielded as missiles; but, in general, they appear to be mystical powers exercised by the individual,—such as those of paralysing an enemy, or locking his senses fast in sleep, or bringing down storm and rain and fire from heaven. In the usual strain of the Hindu mythology, they are supposed to assume celestial shapes, endowed with human faculties, and, in this capacity, are alluded to in the text. The list of them, one hundred, is given in the first book of the Rāmāyaṇa; and there, also, they are described as embodied, and address Rāma, saying: ‘Command us, O Rāghava, of mighty arm. Here we are, O chief of men: command us. What shall we do for thee?’ The son of Raghu replied: ‘Depart, all of you, and, in time of necessity, when called to mind, render me assistance. They then circumambulated Rāma, and, having said so be it, received permission to depart, and went whence they came.’ The Rāmāyaṇa calls them, also, the sons of Kṛīśāśwa, and the descendant of Bhṛigu, asked him what were the best which he conquered the tribes of barbarians who had in-sons of Jayā and Vijayā, the daughters of Prajāpati. (Rāmāyaṇa, Book I., Sections 20, 26, and 42.)”

For the armiform progeny of Kṛishāśwa, see the present work, Vol. II., p. 29, text and note 2.

Mention is made of a similar mysterious weapon, in the Bhāgavata-purāṇa, I., VII., 18—32. The text and Burnouf's translation here follow:

“Mais l'assassin des enfants de Drâupadî, qui avait mis pied à terre, troublé à la vue d'Ardjuna qui accourait de loin sur son char, s'enfuit pour sauver sa vie, de toute la rapidité de sa course, comme le soleil reculant de crainte devant Rudra (Çiva).

“Voyant que ses chevaux fatigués le laissaient sans ressource, le fils du Brâhmane songea, pour sauver sa vie, au javelot nommé Brahmaçiras (Tête de Brahmâ).

“Alors, dirigeant sa pensée sur cet objet, et s'étant plongé dans l'eau, il lança le javelot, quoiqu'il ignorât le moyen de le retenir, s'il venait à mettre en danger les êtres vivants.

“Il en sortit un feu indomptable qui enveloppait tout le ciel; alors prévoyant le danger qui menaçait les créatures, Ardjuna dit à Vichnú:

“Krichná! Krichná au bras puissant! toi qui donnes la sécurité à ceux qui te sont dévoués! tu es le seul qui puisses délivrer du monde les créatures qui y sont consumées.

“Oui, tu es le Seigneur suprême, Purucha, ce premier être, supérieur à la Nature, qui se dégageant de Mâyâ par l'énergie de sa pensée, subsiste absolu en lui-même.

“C'est toi-même qui, par ta puissance, établis sous la forme de la loi et des autres avantages ce qui donne le salut au monde des créatures, dont l'intelligence est troublée par Mâyâ.

“De même, cette incarnation [sous laquelle tu te manifestes à mes yeux], tu l'as revêtue pour te charger du fardeau de la terre, et pour offrir un perpétuel sujet de méditations à ceux qui te connaissent et dont la pensée n'a pas d'autre objet que toi.

In stanzas 10—16 of the chapter following that just quoted from, the brahmaśiras is again introduced, with other fire-tipped darts.

It has been thought worth while to give the preceding passage at length, since it shows, quite as clearly as any other that I have met with, the sort of fiery weapon known to the Hindus of old times.

An interesting and learned disquisition on ancient and oriental fire-arms will be found in Sir Henry M. Elliot's Bibliographical Index to the Historians of Muhammedan India, Vol. I., Note II,—pp. 340—375.

the institutions of caste, order, and purificatory practices: no other path is the way to please him. He who offers sacrifices sacrifices to him; he who murmurs prayer prays to him; he who injures living creatures injures him: for Hari is all beings. Janárdana, therefore, is propitiated by him who is attentive to established observances, and follows the duties prescribed for his caste. The Brahman, the Kshattriya, the Vaiśya, and the Śúdra, who attends to the rules enjoined his caste,* best worships Vishnú. Keśava is most pleased with him who does good to others; who never utters abuse, calumny, or untruth;† who never covets another's wife or another's wealth, and who bears ill-will towards none; who neither beats nor slays any animate or inanimate thing; who is ever diligent in the service of the gods, of the Brahmans, and of his spiritual preceptor; who is always desirous of the welfare of all creatures, of his children, and of his own soul; in whose pure heart no pleasure is derived from the imperfections of love and hatred. The man, O monarch, who conforms to the duties enjoined, by scriptural authority, for every caste and condition of life is he who best worships Vishnú: there is no other mode."

Aurva having thus spoken, Sagara said to him: "Tell me, then, venerable Brahman, what are the duties of caste and condition:¹ I am desirous of knowing them." To which Aurva answered and said: "Attentively listen to the duties which I shall describe, as those, severally, of the Brahman, the Kshatriya, the Vaiśya,* and the Śūdra. The Brahman should make gifts, should worship the gods with sacrifices, should be assiduous in studying the Vedas, should perform ablutions and libations with water, and should preserve the sacred flame. For the sake of subsistence, he may offer sacrifices on behalf of others, and may instruct them in the Śāstras; and he may accept presents, of a liberal description, in a becoming manner (or, from respectable persons, and at an appropriate season). He must ever seek to promote the good of others, and do evil unto none; for the best riches of a Brahman are universal benevolence. He should look upon the jewels of another person as if they were pebbles, and should, at proper periods, procreate offspring by his wife. These are the duties of a Brahman.

No other Paurāṇik work, however, contains a series of chapters exactly analogous to those which follow, and which contain a compendious and systematic description of the Āchāras, or personal and social obligations of the Hindus. The tenour of the whole is conformable to the Institutes of Manu; and many passages are the same.

give presents to Brahmans, perform various sacrifices, and study the scriptures. His especial sources of maintenance are arms and the protection of the earth. The guardianship of the earth is, indeed, his especial province. By the discharge of this duty a king attains his objects, and realizes a share of the merit of all sacrificial rites. By intimidating the bad, and cherishing the good, the monarch who maintains the discipline of the different castes secures whatever region he desires.

“Brahmá, the great parent of creation,* gave to the Vaiśya the occupations of commerce and agriculture, and the feeding of flocks and herds,† for his means of livelihood: and sacred study, sacrifice, and donation are, also, his duties, as is the observance of fixed and occasional rites.

“Attendance upon the three regenerate castes is the province of the Śúdra; and by that he is to subsist, or by the profits of trade, or the earnings of mechanical labour. He is, also, to make gifts; and he may offer the sacrifices in which food is presented, as well as obsequial offerings.¹

¹ The Pákayajna,‡ or sacrifice in which food is offered, implies either the worship of the Viśwadevas, the rites of hospitality, or occasional oblations, on building a house, the birth of a child, or any occasion of rejoicing. It is to be understood, however, that this injunction intends his performing these ceremonies through the agency of a Brahman; as a Śúdra cannot repeat the

“Besides these, their respective obligations, there are duties equally incumbent upon all the four castes.* These are: the acquisition of property, for the support of their families; cohabitation with their wives, for the sake of progeny; tenderness towards all creatures, patience, humility, truth, purity, contentment, decency of deco-

Mantras, or prayers, that accompany them: and it might be a question how far he might be present; for he ought not even to hear such prayers repeated. The performance of funeral rites involves some personal share; and the Śúdra must present the cakes: but it must be done without Mantras; as the Mitákshará:† ‘This rite (the presentation of cakes) must be performed by the Śúdras, without formulæ, on the twelfth day:’ शूद्राणामथेत-

शूदेणापि प्रकर्तव्याः पञ्चैते मन्त्रवर्जिताः ।

It may be suspected, that the Purānas relaxed, in some degree, from the original rigour; for it may be inferred, that the great ceremonies were altogether withheld from Śúdras in the time of Manu, who declares, that none have any right or part (Adhikára) in his code, except those who perform rites with Mantras,—or the three regenerate castes (II., 16‡),—and denounces, as heinous sins, teaching the Vedas to Śúdras, performing sacrifices for them, or which Gotama confirms.‡ Some restrict the sense of Mantra, also, to the prayers of the Vedas, and allow the Śūdras to use those of the Purāṇas; as Śūlapāṇi: न वेदेष्वधिकारो शूद्रस्य विद्यते पुराणेष्वधिकारः । And the Tithi Tattwa is cited, in the Śūdra Kamalākara,§ as allowing them any Mantras except those of the Vedas: वैदिकेतरमन्त्रपाठे शूद्रस्याधिकारः ।

“Among these three acts, done against rule, namely, accepting gifts, assisting to sacrifice, and teaching the Veda, the accepting of gifts is especially base in this world, and, in the world to come, is, to a Brāhman, matter of condemnation:

“For that the acts of assisting to sacrifice and teaching the Veda always have reference to the initiated; whereas the act of accepting gifts has reference even to the Śūdra, most low of birth.

“The sin committed in wrongfully assisting to sacrifice or in wrongfully teaching the Veda is expiated by oblations in the form of silent prayer; but that consequent on illegally accepting gifts, by relinquishment of what is given and by mortification.”

CHAPTER IX.

Duties of the religious student, householder, hermit, and mendicant.

AURVA continued.—“When the youth has been invested with the thread (of his caste), let him diligently prosecute the study of the Vedas, in the house of his preceptor, with an attentive spirit, and leading a life of continence. He is to wait upon his Guru, assiduously observant of purificatory practices; and the Veda is to be acquired by him, whilst he is regular in the performance of religious rites. In the morning Sandhyá, he is first to salute the sun; in the evening, fire;* and, then, to address his preceptor with respect. He must stand, when his master is standing; move, when he is walking; and sit beneath him, when he is seated: he must never sit, nor walk, nor stand, when his teacher does the reverse. When desired by him, let him read the Veda attentively, placed before his preceptor; and let him eat the food he has collected as alms, when permitted by his teacher.¹ Let him bathe in water which has first been used for his preceptor’s ablutions; and, every morning, bring fuel, and water, and whatsoever else may be required.

and perform their ablutions, with rites enjoined by the Vedas, at sacred shrines,—houseless, and without food, and resting, for the night, at the dwelling at which they arrive in the evening. The householder is, to them, a constant refuge and parent:* it is his duty to give them a welcome, and to address them with kindness, and to provide them, whenever they come to his house, with a bed, a seat, and food. A guest disappointed by a householder, who turns away from his door, transfers to the latter all his own misdeeds, and bears away his religious merit.^{1†} In the house of a good man, contumely, arrogance, hypocrisy, repining,[‡] contradiction,[§] and violence are annihilated: and the householder who fully performs this, his chief duty of hospitality, is released from every kind of bondage, and obtains the highest of stations, (after death).

Let the wandering mendicant‡ call nothing his own, and suppress desire, anger, covetousness, pride, and folly. The sage who gives no cause for alarm to living beings need never apprehend any danger from them. Describe these to me; for all things are known, chief of Bhṛigu's race, unto you." To this Aurva replied: "I will communicate to you, O king, that which you have asked,—the invariable and occasional rites which men should perform. Do you attend.

A man is not to continue a student or Brahmachárin, i. e., a cænobite, for life; nor is he to become a mendicant, without previously passing through the order of householder. In practice, however, the prohibition is, not unfrequently, disregarded.

² By this is to be understood, according to the commentator, merely a young girl, but, at the same time, one not immature; for, otherwise, he observes, a man of thirty—by which age he completes his sacred studies,—would espouse a girl of but ten years of age.† According to Manu,‡ however, the period of religious study does not terminate until thirty-six; and, in the East, a girl of twelve would be marriageable. The text of Yájñaval-

† On the contrary, the commentator disallows, absolutely, even where the bridegroom is eight and forty, the marriage of a girl above ten years of age; on the ground that, after that period, she has her catamenia, &c. &c.

The following dicta on the time when a female should marry are cited, by Jīmūtavāhana, in the Dāyabhāga; pp. 272, 273, Calcutta edition of 1829. The first extract is from the Vasishṭha-smṛiti, Chapter XVII.:

यावत्तु कन्यामृतवः स्पृशन्ति
 तुल्यैः सकामामपि याच्यमानाम् ।
 तावन्ति भूतानि हतानि ताभ्यां
 मातापितृभ्यामिति धर्मवादः ॥

"So many seasons of menstruation as overtake a maiden feeling the passion of love and sought in marriage by persons of suitable rank, even so many are the beings destroyed by both her father and her mother: this is a maxim of the law."

Paithinasi is alleged as declaring: यावन्नोज्झियेते स्तनौ तावदेव देया । अथ ऋतुमती भवति तदा दाता प्रतिग्रहीता च नरकमाप्नोति पितृपितामहप्रपितामहाश्च विष्टायां जायन्ते । तस्मान्नग्निका दातव्या ।

"A damsel should be given in marriage, before her breasts swell. But, if she have menstruated [before marriage], both the giver and the taker fall to the abyss of hell; and her father, grandfather, and great-grandfather are born [insects] in ordure. Therefore she should be given in marriage while she is yet a girl."

The preceding translations are taken from the Two Treatises on the Hindu Law of Inheritance, by Colebrooke, p. 186. His earlier renderings of the passages will be found in his Digest of Hindu Law, &c., London edition, Vol. II., p. 387.

In the Panchatantra,—III., śl. 213; p. 189, ed. Kosegarten,—we find the ensuing stanza:

असंप्राप्त रजा गौरी प्राप्ते रजसि रोहिणी ।
 अव्यञ्जना भवेत्कन्या कुचहीना च नग्निका ॥

Nagnikā is here vaguely said to signify a girl without breasts. This word, which Colebrooke renders by "yet a girl", is understood, by Val-labhagaṇi, to intend a maiden of eight years. If he be right, it is a synonym of gauri. No ordinary lexicographical authority seems to make the nagnikā more than ten: see Colebrooke's Amarakośa, sub voce. But, to judge from my next extract, the term appears to be, in some instances, as comprehensive as kanyā, 'virgin.'

In the Nirñayasindhu of Kamalākara,—Bombay edition of 1857, III. A, fol. 31 v and 32 r,—occurs the following extract, credited to the Mahābhārata:

त्रिंशद्वर्षः षोडशाब्दां भार्यां विन्देत नम्रिकाम् ।
दशवर्षोऽष्टवर्षां वा धर्मे सीदति सत्वरः ।
अतो प्रवृत्ते रजसि कन्यां दद्यात्पिता सकृत् ॥

Whence came these lines? The first two look like a mixing up, from misrecollection, of the stanza cited in p. 104, note †, infra, with the Anuśāsana-parvan, XLIV., 14, (Bombay edition), which runs thus:

त्रिंशद्वर्षो दशवर्षां भार्यां विन्देत नम्रिकाम् ।
एकविंशतिवर्षो वा सप्तवर्षामवाप्नुयात् ॥

"Let a man of thirty years marry, for wife, a damsel of ten years; or let a man of twenty-one years secure a damsel of seven years."

The next quotation, also, is referred to the Mahābhārata:

सप्तसंवत्सरादूर्ध्वं विवाहः सार्ववर्णिकः ।
कन्यायाः शस्यते राजन्नन्यथा धर्मगर्हितः ॥

"The marriage, for all the castes, of a girl after her seventh year is commended, O king. Her marriage otherwise is reprobated by the law."

Of the first of the last three passages the first line is quoted,—immetrically, incorrectly, and, probably, from memory,—and without mention of its source, in Jagannātha Tarkapanchānana's Vivādhahangārāva. See Colebrooke's Digest of Hindu Law, &c., London edition, Vol. III., p. 328.

Mādhava says, in his commentary on the Parāśara-smṛiti:

जन्मतो गर्भाधानाद्वा पञ्चमाब्दात्परं शुभम् ।
कुमारीवरणं दानं मेखलाबन्धनं तथा ॥

This approves the selection of a girl, for matrimony, at an interval of five years from the time she was born or conceived.

An extract from the Jyotir-nibandha may be added, for its superstitious oddity:

षडब्दमध्ये नोद्वाह्या कन्या वर्षद्वयं यतः ।
सोमो भुङ्क्ते ततस्तद्वन्धर्वश्च तथानलः ॥

[the Moon?] enjoys her for two years; then, in like manner, a gandharva and, similarly, Fire."

She has, thus, three unhuman husbands, before she is wived by a man. In the Yājñavalkya-smṛiti, I., 71, we read:

सोमः शौचं ददौ स्त्रीणां गन्धर्वश्च शुभां गिरम् ।
पावकः सर्वमेध्यत्वं मेध्या वै योषितो ह्यतः ॥

"On women Soma bestowed brilliancy; a gandharva, a pleasant voice; Fire, universal purity. Therefore are women truly pure."

The author of the Mitāksharā, in commenting on this stanza, expresses himself much to the effect of the Jyotir-nibandha. His words are: परिणयनात्पूर्वं सोमगन्धर्ववह्नयः स्त्रियो भुक्त्वा यथाक्रमं तासां शौचमधुरवचनसर्वमेध्यत्वानि दत्तवन्तः ।

For similar ideas, see the Panchatantra, ed. Kosegarten, pp. 188, 189. An anonymous stanza is there given, authorizing the nuptials of a damsel of eight years of age.

* The original has adhikāṅgi, "possessing superfluous limbs."

† Professor Wilson must have overlooked "Manu", IX., 94:

त्रिंशद्वर्षो वहिक्न्यां हृद्यां द्वादशवर्षिकीम् ।
अष्टवर्षोऽष्टवर्षा वा धर्मे सीदति सत्वरः ॥

"Let a man of thirty years wed a lovely maid of twelve; or a man of twenty-four, a maid of eight. If his virtue is being impaired, let him be expeditious."

The meaning seems to be, according to Kullūka, that, in case a young man is disposed to usurp on the rights of the married state, he should lose no time in taking a wife; provided, always, that his proficiency in scriptural knowledge is satisfactory.

In the Nirṇayasindhu's citation of the preceding stanza, द्वाष्टवर्षः, 'of sixteen years', is read for अष्टवर्षः, 'of twenty-four years.' But Medhātithi and Kullūka know nothing of this lection.

It has just been evinced, that, as to the marriage of an immature girl, venerable warrant is adducible for it, beyond the pages of the Vishnū-purāṇa. The point, whether this work does not constructively furnish justification of such a practice, is discussed in a note near the end of Chapter XVI. of the present Book.

Let a householder marry a maiden† who is, in kin, at least five degrees remote from his mother, and seven from his father, with the ceremonies enjoined by law.²

“The forms of marriage are eight,—the Bráhma, Daiva, Ársha, Prájápatya, Ásura, Gándharva, Rákshasa, and Paisácha; which last is the worst:³ but the caste to which either form has been enjoined, as lawful, by inspired sages, should avoid any other mode of taking a wife. The householder who espouses a female connected with him by similarity of religious and civil obligations, and along with her discharges the duties of his condition, derives, from such a wife, great benefits."

CHAPTER XI.

Of the Sadácháras or perpetual obligations of a householder.

Daily purifications, ablutions, libations, and oblations: hospitality: obsequial rites: ceremonies to be observed at meals, at morning and evening worship, and on going to rest.

SAGARA (again) said (to Aurva): "Relate to me, Muni, the fixed observances* of the householder, by attending to which he will never be rejected from this world or the next."

Aurva replied to him thus: "Listen, prince, to an account of those perpetual observances by adhering to which both worlds are subdued. Those who are called Sádhus (saints) are they who are free from (all) defects; and the term Sat means the same, or Sádhu. Those practices or observances (Ácháras†) which they follow are, therefore, called Sadácháras, 'the institutions or observances of the pious.'¹ The seven Řishis,

Let the wise man awake in the Muhūrta of Brahṁā (or, in the third Muhūrta,—about two hours before sunrise*), and, with a composed mind, meditate on two of the objects of life (virtue and wealth), and on topics not incompatible with them. Let him, also, think upon desire, as not conflicting with the other two, and, thus, contemplate, with equal indifference, the three ends of life, for the purpose of counteracting the unseen consequences of good or evil acts. Let him avoid wealth and desire, if they give uneasiness to virtue; and abstain from virtuous or religious acts, if they involve misery, or are censured by the world.^{1†} Having risen,

The Translator mistook, for mitra, ‘the sun’, maitra, n., ‘alvine exoneration’, which is said to come from maitra, m., ‘the anus’, of which the Sun is the guardian deity. Ratnagarbha etymologizes maitra. Also see the Laws of the Mānavas, IV., 152, and Kullūka’s gloss thereon.

† I have corrected “south-east”; the original being nairṛityām. This is a compromise between the directions to be observed by day and by night, or north and south, respectively. See the Laws of the Mānavas, IV., 50, and our text, just below.

Of all the ancient Hindu legislators, Dakṣa is most minutiose on the subject of daily ablution. His injunctions, as incorrectly cited by Ratna-garbha, I have rectified by reference to two manuscripts and the Calcutta edition of the Dakṣa-smṛiti; and I have compared them as quoted in various ceremonial treatises, more particularly in an ancient copy of Āśāditya's Karmapradīpabhāṣya. The passage, as I would read it, is as follows:

The genuineness of the fourth line is open to suspicion. It is wanting in several places where these stanzas are adduced.

Professor Wilson must have thought that he saw -माल्य°, instead of -मङ्गल्य°, in the original. For "garlands, and perfumes," read "sandal, dūrvā, &c." Durvā ordinarily means a certain sweet-scented grass. The oil expressed from it seems to be here denoted.

† Dharma, "duty".

‡ The original is simply japet, "let him pray inaudibly."

§ These sacrifices are called, in the original, somasamsthā, haviṣamsthā, and pākasamsthā. On the meaning of pāka,—'little', or 'good'—in pākasamsthā, see Professor Max Müller's Ancient Sanskrit Literature, p. 203; or Dr. Stenzler's edition of Āśvalāyana's Gṛīhyasūtra, Part II., p. 2, § 2, 2.

According to Gautama,† there are seven kinds of each of the three sorts of sacrificial rites particularized in the text,—or those in which the Soma juice, oiled butter, or food, are presented. Of the latter, according to Manu, there are four varieties,—the offering of food to the Viśwadevas, to spirits, to deceased

* Devakhátajala.

† He is quoted, by the commentator, for his enumeration of sacrifices. These, as I find, on reference to the Gautama-smṛiti, are named as follows:

1. Ashtaká.	Agnýádheya.	Agnishtoma.
2. Pārvaṇa.	Agnihoṭra.	Atyagnishtoma.

6. Chaitri.	Nirúdhapaśubandha.	Atirátra.
7. Áswayují.	Sautrámaṇi.	Aptoryama.

They have almost identical names, throughout, but are somewhat otherwise arranged, in Nárāyaṇa's commentary on Śāṅkháyaṇa's Grihya-sūtra, as adduced by Dr. Stenzler, in the Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft, Vol. VII., p. 527, note 2. See, further, ibid., Vol. IX., p. LXXIV. According to Ápastamba—see the Taittiriya-saṁhitá and Commentary, in the Bibliotheca Indica, Vol. I., p. 957,—several of the sacrifices of the first class bear appellations widely different from those given above. Baudháyaṇa, quoted in the same place, gives them all still different names.

In note § to p. 40, supra, a passage is cited from Ratnagarbha, comparable to which, as concerns its groupment of sacrifices,—an understanding of which demands further inquiry,—I here quote another from Śankara's Commentary on the Bṛihad-áraṇyaka Upanishad, I., III., 1: न चाग्निहोत्रदर्शपूर्णमासचातुर्मास्यपशुबन्धसोमानां कर्मणां स्वतः काम्यनित्यत्वविवेकोऽस्ति ।

The commentator adds,—somewhat as in note 1 in this page,—that he is permitted to take water to his house, for bathing, if he must; that he may substitute warm water, when necessary, for cold; and that, in exigency, it is lawful for him to make shift with a mantra-snāna,—in other words, to commute ablution for a prayer. Compare Colebrooke's Miscellaneous Essays, Vol. I., pp. 124, 136.

† The commentator observes, that the bathing and worship here described belong to noon-day.

‡ Four pākayajnas are there spoken of; but their names are not specified in the text. Kullūka says they are the vaiśvadevahoma, balikarman, nityaśrāddha, and atithibhojana. These are four out of five pākayajnas which belong to a classification different from, and later than, that which Gautama recognizes. See p. 40, note §; and p. 93, notes 2 and 3, supra; also, Kullūka on the Laws of the Mānavas, III., 67; Dr. Stenzler's edition of Āśwalāyana's Gṛīhyasūtra, Part II., p. 6, § 1; and Professor Max Müller's Ancient Sanskrit Literature, p. 93.

as all beings, and this food, and I, and Vishnú, are not different, I, therefore, give, for their sustenance, the food that is one with the body of all creatures. May all beings that are comprehended in the fourteen orders of existent things¹ be satisfied with the food bestowed, by me, for their gratification, and be delighted!' Having uttered this prayer, let the devout believer cast the food upon the ground, for the nourishment* of all kinds of beings: for the householder is, thence, the supporter of them all. longer, if he pleases,—to await the arrival of a guest. Should such a one arrive, he is to be received with a hospitable welcome; a seat is to be offered to him, and his feet are to be washed, and food is to be given him with liberality,* and he is to be civilly and kindly spoken to; and, when he departs, to be sent away, by his host, with friendly wishes.† A householder should ever pay attention to a guest who is not an inhabitant of the same village, but who comes from another place, and whose name and lineage are unknown. He who feeds himself, and neglects the poor and friendless stranger in want of hospitality, goes to hell. Let a householder who has a knowledge of Brahmá‡ reverence a guest, without inquiring his studies, his school, his practices, or his race.¹§

Muhúrta, or one thirtieth of the day and night, would be twelve minutes.||

¹ These precepts, and those which follow, are of the same tenour as those given by Manu, on the subject of hospitality (III., 99, &c.), but more detailed.

* Śraddhá. Elsewhere the Translator renders this word by “faith”.

† गच्छतश्चानुयानेन प्रीतिमुत्पादयेद्ब्रूही ।

It is, thus, directed, that, when the guest departs, his host should bear him company,—for a short distance, only, of course. The less common reading anuyātena must yield the same sense. The unique lection anupānena might move an imaginative speculator to attribute the idea of the stirrup-cup to the ancient Hindus.

‡ The Sanskrit directs the householder to reverence his guest ‘by regarding him as if he were Hirañyagarbha,’—hirañyagarbha-buddhyā.

§ “School,” “practices,” and “race” here render gotra, charaṇa, and kula, ‘stock,’ ‘school,’ and ‘family’. The commentator gives charaṇa two meanings,—vedāvāntaraśākhā and āchāra.

"A householder should, also, at the perpetual Śrāddha,* entertain another Brahman who is of his own country, whose family and observances are known, and who performs the five sacramental rites.† He is, likewise, to present, to a Brahman learned in the Vedas, four handfuls of food, set apart with the exclamation Hanta;‡ and he is to give, to a mendi-

"Let him, O king, also set apart the choicest of food, and present it, by way of appropriation, hallowed by the utterance hanta, to a Brahman versed in holy writ."

The commentator says: अन्नाग्रं भोजनाद्यनर्वाष्टम् । अत्र चोक्तम् ।

ग्रासमात्रा भवेद्विद्धा अग्रं ग्रासचतुष्टयम् ।

अग्राण्येव तु चत्वारि हन्तकारं प्रचक्षते ॥

मनुष्येभ्यो हन्तेति मन्त्रेणोपकल्पितमन्नं हन्तकारोपकल्पितम् । निर्वापभूतं पृथक्कृत्य स्थापितम् ।

A stanza, the same in meaning as the one here quoted, is adduced, from Hemachandra's scholiast, in Messrs. Boehtlingk and Rieu's edition of the Abhidhānachintāmañi, p. 366:

ग्रासप्रमाणं भिक्षा स्यादग्रं ग्रासचतुष्टयम् ।

अग्रं चतुर्गुणं प्राङ्महन्तकारं द्विजोत्तमाः ॥

Annāgra and hantakāra, rendered by 'the choicest of food' and 'the utterance hanta', have, thus, denoted specific quantities,—four mouthfuls and sixteen. But neither of these acceptations—which are, probably, of late date,—seems to be intended in the passage under annotation. One or other of them is there impossible.

The following is taken from the Bṛihad-āranyaka Upanishad,—V., VIII.:

†† Prahwa-svāgatokti means ‘a salutation and a welcome’; prahwa being explained by prahwatwa, i. e., prāñāma. But, in several MSS., the reading is prahwak, ‘complaisant.’

who arrives by day. A man should, therefore, most especially show respect to one who comes to him in the evening, for shelter; as the attentions that gratify him will give pleasure to all the gods. Let the householder, then, according to his ability, afford a guest food, pot-herbs, water, a bed, a mat, or, if he can do no more, ground on which to lie.*

“After eating his evening meal, and having washed his feet, the householder is to go to rest. His bed is

So read most of my MSS. The commentary says: शयनं कम्बलादि । स्रस्तरः कटतृणादिः । मही स्थलमात्रमपि । Several MSS. of the text, and one of the commentary, have prastara, for srastara; one MS. has srastara altered into saihstara, ‘a couch’; and one has swastara. “Bed” denotes, then, ‘a blanket, &c.’; and the srastara, which the Translator calls “mat”, consists of ‘a mat, straw, etc.’ In the Laws of the Mānavas, II., 204, the reading, according to Kullūka, is srastara; but he does not explain it. Sir William Jones gives “a pavement of stones.” Medhātithi has the lection prastara, which he defines to be: दर्भादितृणाकीर्ण आस्तरः, ‘a rug strewed with darbha or other grass.’ In Gulzār Pandit’s Hindi version of the Mānavadharmasāstra, srastara is rendered chatūi, ‘mat’. In the unfinished Calcutta translation of the same Code,—made, I am told, by Tārāchandra Chakravartin,—this term is interpreted “a seat made of sprouts and leaves”, with the following comment: “Srastara is a word which is not much in use. It is not found in the Sanskrita dictionaries commonly consulted, nor even in the voluminous compilation of Dr. Wilson; and yet, unaccountable as the thing must appear, the word is left unexplained by the commentator [Kullūka]. We have found it, however, with the meaning given above, in a dictionary which was compiled and published some years ago, and is entitled Prānakrishna-śabdāmbudhi. These circumstances considered, it will not appear improbable, that Sir William Jones took it to be a mistake, in the manuscript, for prastara, ‘stone’; or that he found the word to be prastara, in his manuscript, and gave the rendering accordingly.” The Śabdāmbudhi, ed. of 1856, defines srastara ‘seat’, ‘support for sitting.’ Finally, srastara, on the faith of the Śabdakalpadruma, is found in the Śuddhitattwa, and is equivalent to āsana, ‘seat.’

The word prastara recurs in p. 150, infra.

On these occasions, the wise will restrain their appetites, and occupy themselves in the worship of the gods, as enjoined by holy writ, in meditation, and in prayer: and he who behaves differently will fall into a hell where ordure will be his food.* Let not a man stimulate his desires by medicines, nor gratify them with unnatural objects,† or in public or holy places. Let him not think incontinently of another's wife, much less address her to that end; for such a man will be born, in future life, as a creeping insect.‡ He who commits adultery is punished both here and hereafter: for his days, in this world, are cut short; and, when dead, he falls into hell. Thus considering, let a man approach his own wife in the proper season, or even at other times.”§

Miscellaneous obligations, purificatory, ceremonial, and moral.

AURVA continued.—“Let a respectable householder ever venerate the gods, kine, Brahmans, saints,* aged persons, and holy teachers. Let him observe the two daily Sandhyás, and offer oblations to fire. Let him dress in untorn garments, use delicate herbs and flowers, wear emeralds and other precious stones, keep his hair smooth and neat, scent his person with agreeable perfumes, and always go handsomely attired, decorated with garlands of white flowers.† Let him never appropriate another's property, nor address him with the least unkindness. Let him always speak amiably, and with truth, and never make public another's faults. Let him not desire another's prosperity, nor seek his enmity. Let him not mount upon a crazy vehicle, nor take shelter under the bank of a river, (which may fall upon him). A wise man will not form a friendship, nor walk in the same path, with one who is disesteemed, who is a sinner, or a drunkard,‡ who has many enemies, or who is lousy,§ with a harlot, or her gallant, with a pauper,|| or a liar, with a prodi-

* As will be seen below, to climb a tree to any height, apparently, is considered to be objectionable. The heterogeneous collection of maxims dictated by prudence, propriety, and superstition, of which this chapter is, in good part, made up, may be fitly accompanied by the subjoined extract from Varadarāja's Girvāṇapadamānjari, or, as the work is called, in one copy, Dhundhirāja's Girvāṇavāgmanjari or Girvāṇaśabdapadamānjari: सर्वत्र दुराचाराः सन्त्येव । तथा हि । दक्षिणदेशे कलौ मातुलकन्यापरिणयनं दुराचारः । * * * * * आन्ध्रदेशे हलाचरणं दुराचारः । कर्णाटकदेशे स्नानं विना भोजनं दुराचारः । ताम्रपात्रे गव्यादिनिक्षेपणं दुराचारः । महाराष्ट्र उच्छिष्टभक्षणं दुराचारः । ज्येष्ठं परित्यज्य कनिष्ठस्य विवाहकरणं दुराचारः । * * * * * द्रविडकेरलयोः सर्वासां कुचप्रदर्शनं दुराचारः । पथि पर्युषितान्नभक्षणं दुराचारः । केरलदेशे उपरिसुरतं दुराचारः । कोङ्कणदेशे वृक्षारोहणं दुराचारः । गुर्जरदेशे चर्मोदकपानं तृतीयदिने रजस्वलास्नानं दुराचारः । उत्तरदेशे कलौ मांसभक्षणं दुराचारः । पर्वतदेशे क्वचित्कलौ देवरेण सुतोत्पत्तिर्दुराचारः । क्वचिच्छुष्कमांसभक्षणं दुराचारः । * * * * * सिथिलगौडदेशे सदा तैललेपनं दुराचारः । गौडदेशे वेदव्यागो दुराचारः । कान्यकुब्जदेशे पण्यस्थघृतपक्वभक्षणं दुराचारः । विवाहादौ भोजनसमये परस्परस्पर्शनं दुराचारः । उत्कलदेशे मुखसुरतं दुराचारः । गौडद्रविडकेरलोत्कलमैथिलेषु पक्वकलमतण्डुलोदनभक्षणं दुराचारः । सर्वेषां पथि ताम्बूलभक्षणं दुराचारः । मगधे वर्णसंकरणं दुराचारः । चर्मवत्पादपाशीगमनं दुराचारः । काश्मीरदेशीया द्विजा केवलं यवनप्रायाः । खलु तेषां दुराचाराणां गणनैव नास्ति । Thus read, in combination, my two MSS., so far as they are legible. The book from which this passage is taken emanated, at least in one of its two forms, from Mahārāshtra; and it imparts instructive hints as to the opinions, on the dark side, entertained, by certain Hindus, of certain others.

CHAPTER XIII.

Of Śráddhas or rites in honour of ancestors, to be performed on occasions of rejoicing. Obsequial ceremonies. Of the Ekoddishṭa or monthly Śráddha, and the Sapiṇḍana or annual one. By whom to be performed.

AURVA continued.—“The bathing of a father, without disrobing, is enjoined, when a son is born; and he is to celebrate the ceremony proper for the event,* which is the Śráddha offered upon joyous occasions.¹

¹ The offerings of the Hindus to the Pitris partake of the character of those of the Romans to the lares and manes, but bear a more conspicuous part in their ritual. They are said, indeed, by Manu (III., 203†), in words repeated in the Váyu and Matsya Purāṇas, and Hari Vamśa, to be of more moment than the worship of the gods:

देवकार्यादपि सदा पितृकार्यं विशिष्यते । ‡

These ceremonies are not to be regarded as merely obsequial; for, independently of the rites addressed to a recently deceased relative,—and, in connexion with him, to remote ancestors, and to the progenitors of all beings,—which are of a strictly obsequial or funeral description, offerings to deceased ancestors, and the Pitris in general, form an essential ceremony, on a great variety of festive and domestic occasions. The Nirṇaya Sindhu, in a passage referred to by Mr. Colebrooke (Asiatic Researches, Vol. VII. §), specifies the following Śráddhas: 1. The Nitya, or perpetual; daily offerings to ancestors in general: 2. The Naimittika, or occasional; as the Ekoddishṭa, or obsequial offerings

* Expressed, in the original, by jāta-karman, for which see Colebrooke's Digest, &c., Vol. III., p. 104, note †.

With composed mind, and thinking on nothing else, the Brahman should offer worship to both the gods and progenitors, and should respectfully circumambulate, keeping Brahmans on his left hand, and give them food.* Standing with his face to the east,† he should present, with the parts of the hand sacred to the gods on account of a kinsman recently deceased: 3. The Kámya, voluntary; performed for the accomplishment of a special design (अभिप्रेतसिद्धये): 4. The Vridhhi; performed on occasions of rejoicing or prosperity: 5. The Sapiñdana; offerings to all individual and to general ancestors: 6. The Párvaña Śráddha; offerings to the manes, on certain lunar days called Parvans, or day of full moon and new moon, and the eighth and fourteenth days of the lunar fortnight: 7. The Goshtí; for the advantage of a number of learned persons, or of an assembly of Brahmans, invited for the purpose: 8. The Śuddhi; one performed to purify a person from some defilement,—an expiatory Śráddha: 9. The Karmánga; one forming part of the initiatory ceremonies, or Sañskáras, observed at conception, birth, tonsure, &c.: 10. The Daivika; to which the gods are invited: 11. The Yátrá Śráddha; held by a person going a journey: and, 12. The Pushí Śráddha; one performed to promote health and wealth. Of these, the four which are considered the most solemn are the rite performed for a parent, or near relative, lately deceased; that which is performed for kindred, collectively; that observed on certain lunar days; and that celebrated on occasions of rejoicing: अत्र पार्वणिकोद्दिष्ट-वृद्धिसपिण्डीकरणात्मकं चतुर्विधमेव मुख्यम् । Nirñaya Sindhu, p. 271.

and* to PrajĀpati, balls of food,¹ with curds, unbruised grain, and jujubes; and should perform, on every accession of good fortune, the rite by which the class of progenitors termed Nāndĭmukha is propitiated.² A

¹ Manu directs the balls to be made from the remainder of the clarified butter constituting the previous oblation to the gods. III., 215.† Kullūka Bhaṭṭa explains, however, the oblation to consist partly of Anna (अन्न),—food, or boiled rice. The latter is the article of which the balls chiefly consist. Yājñavalkya‡ directs them to be made of rice and sesamum-seeds. The Vāyu Purāṇa adds, to these, two ingredients, honey and butter: but various kinds of fruit, of pulse, and of grain, and water, frankincense, sugar, and milk, are, also, mixed up in the Piṇḍas. Their size, also, differs; and, according to Angiras, as quoted by Hemādri, in the Śrāddha Mayūkha,§ they may be of the dimension of the fruit of the jujube, or of the hog-plum, of the fruit of the Bel, or of the wood-apple, or of a fowl's egg. Some authorities direct Piṇḍas of a different size for different Śrāddhas; prescribing them no larger than the wood-apple, at the first or pure funeral ceremony, and as big as a cocoa-nut, at the monthly and annual Śrāddha. In practice, the Piṇḍa is, usually, of such a magnitude, that it may be conveniently held by the hand.

² We have, here, the authority of the text for classing the Nāndĭmukhas amongst the Pitṛis (see p. 98, supra). The verse is:

नान्दीमुखः पितृगणस्तेन श्राद्धेन पार्थिव ।
प्रीयते तत्तु कर्तव्यं पुरुषैः सर्ववृद्धिषु ॥

* The original has vā, 'or'; the injunction allowing an option. The expressions here connected are daivatirtha and kāya, on which vide supra, p. 99, notes 1 and *. The daivatirtha is sometimes called the tirtha of the Rishis,—ārsha.

householder should diligently worship the Pitṛis so named, at the marriage of a son or daughter, on entering a new dwelling, on giving a name to a child, on performing his tonsure and other purificatory ceremonies,* at the binding of the mother's hair during gestation, or on (first) seeing the face of a son, or the like. The Śrāddha on such occasions, however, has been briefly alluded to. Hear now, O king, the rules for the performance of obsequial rites.

“Having washed the corpse with holy water, decorated it with garlands, and burnt it without the village, the kinsmen, having bathed with their clothes on, are to stand with their faces to the south, and offer libations (to the deceased), addressing him by name, and adding, ‘wherever thou mayest be.’¹ They then re-

And the same Gaṇa or class is presently again named:

नान्दीमुखं पितृगणं पूजयेत्प्रयतो गृही ।

The Mantra of the Vriddhi or festival Śrāddha is, also, said, in the Nirṇaya Sindhu, to be नान्दीमुखेभ्यः पितृभ्यः स्वाहा । According to the authorities, however, which are cited in that work, there seems to be some uncertainty about the character of the Nāndīmukhas; and they are addressed both as Pitṛis and gods; being, in the former case, either the ancestors prior to the great-grandfather,—ancestors collectively, or a certain class of them; and, in the latter, being identified with the Viśwadevas, or a class of them called also Ūrdhwavaktra. The term Nāndīmukha is, also, applied to the rite itself, or to the Vriddhi Śrāddha, and to one addressed to maternal ancestors. Nirṇaya Sindhu, pp. 268, &c.

turn, along with the cattle (coming from pasture), to the village, and, upon the appearance of the stars, retire to rest, sleeping on mats spread upon the earth.* Every day (whilst the mourning lasts), a cake (or ball) of food¹ is to be placed on the ground, (as an offering) to the deceased; and rice,† without flesh, is to be daily‡ eaten. Brahmans are to be fed for as many days as the mourner pleases; for the soul of the defunct derives satisfaction accordingly as his relatives are content with their entertainment.§ On the first day, or the third, or seventh, or ninth (after the death

यत्र तत्र स्थितायैतदमुकायेति वादिनः ।

¹ The proper period of mourning is ten days, on each of which, offerings of cakes and libations of water are to be made to the deceased, augmenting the number of cakes each day, so that, on the last day, ten cakes are presented. When the period is shorter, the same number of ten cakes must be distributed amongst the several days; or they may be, all, presented on one day. Nirṇaya Sindhu, p. 429.

* कटधर्मास्ततः कुर्युर्भूमौ स्रस्तारशायिनः ।

Here—compare p. 131, note, supra,—we encounter the unusual vocable srastara, with the variants prastara, saiṁstara, and swastara. Commentary A has srastara; commentary B, prastara: but, as both give the same definition, तृणशय्या, it is presumable that one or other of them is sophisticated as to the term defined.

On the expression कटधर्मान् the commentator remarks प्रेतकृत्यानि.

† So the commentator explains bhakta.

On the fourth day,¹ the ashes and bones should be collected; after which the body of one connected with the deceased by offerings of funeral cakes may be touched (by an indifferent person, without thereby incurring impurity); and those who are related only by presentation of water† are qualified for any occupation.² The former class of

² They are no longer unclean. The Sapiñḍas, or those connected by offerings of cakes to common ancestors, extend to seven degrees, ascending or descending; the Samānodakas, or those similarly connected by presentations of water, to fourteen degrees.‡

* The words वस्त्रत्यागं * कृत्वा imply that the clothes should be laid aside for the second funereal ablution. As we have seen just above, they are to be retained during the first. According to some MSS., however, which have term of impurity for a Brahman is ten days;* for a Kshattriya,† twelve; for a Vaiśya, half a month; and a whole month, for a Śūdra.¹ On the first day (after uncleanness ceases), the nearest relation of the deceased should feed Brahmans at his pleasure, but in uneven numbers, and offer to the deceased a ball of rice upon holy grass‡ placed near the residue of the food that has been eaten. After the guests have been fed, the mourner, according to his caste, is to touch water, a weapon, a goad, or a staff; as he is purified by such contact. He may then resume the duties prescribed for his caste, and follow the avocation ordinarily pursued by its members.

The first set of rites (as essential) are to be performed by the kindred of the father or mother,—whether connected by the offering of the cake or of water,—by the associates of the deceased,* or by the prince who inherits his property. CHAPTER XIV.

Of occasional Śráddhas or obsequial ceremonies: when most efficacious, and at what places.

AURVA proceeded.—“Let the devout performer of an ancestral oblation¹ propitiate Brahmá, Indra, Rudra,

¹ We may here take the opportunity of inquiring who are meant by the Pitṛis: and, generally speaking, they may be called a race of divine beings, inhabiting celestial regions of their own, and receiving into their society the spirits of those mortals for whom the rite of fellowship in obsequial cakes with them, the Sapiṇḍikaraṇa, has been duly performed. The Pitṛis collectively, therefore, include a man's ancestors; but the principal members of this order of beings are of a different origin. The Váyu, Matsya, and Padma Purāṇas, and Hari Vamśa, profess to give an account of the original Pitṛis. The account is much the same, and, for the most part, in the same words, in all. They agree* in distinguishing the Pitṛis into seven classes; three of which are without form (अमूर्तयः), or composed of intellectual, not elementary, substance, and assuming what forms they please; and four are corporeal (समूर्तयः). When they come to the enumeration of the particular classes, they somewhat differ; and the accounts, in all the works, are singularly imperfect. According to a legend given by the Váyu and the Hari Vamśa, the first Pitṛis were the sons of the gods. The gods, having offended Brahmá, by neglecting to worship him, were cursed, by him, to become fools; but, upon their repentance, he directed them to apply to their sons, for instruction. Being taught, accordingly, the rites of ex-

ते पुत्रानब्रुवन्प्रीता लब्धसंज्ञा दिवौकसः ।

यूयं वै पितरोऽस्माकं र्वैर्ययं प्रतिबोधिताः ॥

So the Matsya has:

मन्वन्तरेषु जायन्ते पितरो देवभूनवः ।

‘The Pitṛis are born, in the Manwantaras, as the sons of the gods.’ The Hari Vamśa¶ makes the sons assume the character of fathers; addressing them, ‘Depart, children:’

गम्यतां पुत्रका एवं पुत्रैरुक्ताश्च ते तदा ।

Again, the Vāyu Purāṇa declares the seven orders of Pitṛis to have been, originally, the first gods, the Vairājas, whom Brahmā, with the eye of Yoga, beheld in the eternal spheres, and who are the gods of the gods:

लोकाः सान्तानिका नाम यत्र तिष्ठन्ति भास्वराः ।

Again, in the same work, we have the incorporeal Pitṛis called Vairājas,†† from being the sons of the Prajāpati Virāja:‡‡

अमूर्तयः पितृगणा विराजस्य प्रजापतेः ।

यजन्ति यान्देवगणा वैराजा इति विश्रुताः ॥

The Hari Vamśa* has the same statement, but more precisely distinguishes the Vairājas as one class only of the incorporeal Pitris. The commentator† states the same, calling the three incorporeal Pitris, Vairājas, Agnishwāttas, and Barhishads;‡ and the four corporeal orders, Sukālas, Āngirasas, Suswadhas,§ and Somapas. The Vairājas are described as the fathers of Mená,|| the mother of Umá. Their abode is variously termed the Sántánika, Sanátana, and Soma loka.¶ As the posterity of Virāja, they are the Somasads of Manu. The other classes of Pitris seems that Vairāja is one with Manu. Who, then, is the prajāpati Vairāja? And was Vairāja corrupted into Virāja? Nilakaṇṭha says that Virāja's sons were mánasa, which term he explains by manomātraśarira. Arjuna Miśra, another scholiast on the Harivamśa, identifies Virāja with Brahmá.

Here the Agnishwattas are declared to be the pitrís of the first caste; the Barhishads, of the second; the Kávyas, of the third; the Sukálin, of the fourth; and the Vyámas,—'Fumes', mere smoke,—of mlechchhas and the lowest castemen.

Of the Vyámas I know of no mention except in passages from the Nandi-purána, for which see Dr. Aufrecht's Catalogus, &c., p. 81; also, note || in the next page, and p. 166, infra, note ‡.

‡ Here I have corrected "Havishmantas". § See the next note.

|| As is seen in note ‡ in the preceding page, a Havishmat is synonymously denominated a Havirbhuj. A third designation is Upahúta, which occurs in the following passage and elsewhere:

मरीचिगर्भास्ते लोकान्समाश्रित्य दिवि स्थिताः ।

एते ह्यङ्गिरसः पुत्राः सार्धैः सह विवर्धिताः ॥

These beings are here said to inhabit Marichigarbha, and to have a mind-born daughter Yaśodá.

Nilakántha thus comments on the first term in this passage: मरीचि-गर्भान् । सूर्यरश्मिप्रकाशान् ।

* “Unpropitious aspects” is to represent piḍā, which signifies ‘occultation.’

† This seems to be a mistake. The Matsya-purāṇa has Kāmadugha; with which compare the Mahābhārata, Vana-parvan, sl. 15460. In the Harivamśa, the name is Kāmaga. See note ¶ in this page.

Sukálinś—sons of Vasishṭha, and Pitṛis of the Śúdras (Manu† and Váyu Puráṇa ‡). They are not mentioned in the Padma. The Matsya inserts the name and descent, but specifies them as amongst the incorporeal Pitṛis:

अमूर्तिमन्तः पितरो वसिष्ठस्य मुकालिनः ।

नाम्ना तु मानसाः सर्वे सर्वे ते धर्ममूर्तयः ॥

It may be suspected that the passage is corrupt. The Hari Vamśa § makes the Sukálas sons of Vasishṭha, the Pitṛis of the Brahmans; and gives the title of Somapas to the Pitṛis of the Śúdras. In general, this work follows the Váyu, but with omissions and transpositions, as if it had carelessly mutilated its original.

The personages here spoken of are said to have their home in Mánasa; and a mind-born daughter is affiliated on them, in the form of the river Narmadá. Compare note || in p. 162, supra.

For discrepancies between this extract and that in the next note, additional to those pointed out by the Translator, vide supra, p. 160, note ‡‡.

Besides these Pitris or progenitors, other heavenly beings* are, sometimes, made to adopt a similar character. Thus, Manu† says: "The wise call our fathers Vasus; our paternal grandfathers, Rudras; our paternal great-grandfathers, Ādityas; agreeably to a text of the Vedas:" that is, these divine beings are to be meditated upon, along with, and as not distinct from, progenitors. Hemādri quotes the Nandi Upapurāṇa‡ for a different practice, and directs Vishṇu to be identified with the father; Brahmā, with the grandfather; and Śiva, with the great-grandfather. This, however, is Śaiva innovation. The Vaishṇavas direct Aniruddha to be regarded as one's-self; and Pradyumna, Sankarshaṇa, and Vāsudeva, as the three ancestors. Again, they are identified with Varnā, Prājāpatya, and Agni; or, again, with months, seasons, and years. Nirṇaya Sindhu, p. 284. It may be doubted how far any of these correctly represent the original notions inculcated by the texts of the Vedas, from which,§ in the most essential particulars, they are derived.

* Also vide supra, p. 98, note †; p. 163, note †. The Saunmyas and Kāvyas are mentioned in Vol. II., p. 303, text and note 1; also, with the Agnidagdhas and Anagnidagdhas, in the Mānavadharmasāstra, III., 199:

अग्निदग्धानग्निदग्धान्काव्यान्बर्हिषदस्तथा ।

अग्निष्वात्तांश्च सौम्यांश्च विप्राणामेव निर्दिशेत् ॥

In Goldstücker's Sanskrit Dictionary, the Agnidagdhas are said to be certain pitris "who, when alive, kept up the household flame, and presented oblations with fire"; the Anagnidagdhas, pitris, "apparently, who, when alive, did not observe religious rites."

On these days, water mixed with sesamum-seeds should be regularly presented to the progenitors of mankind; as well as on every solar and lunar eclipse; on the eighth lunations of the dark fortnights of Āgrahāyaṇa, Pausa, and Māgha† (November—February);‡ on the two days commencing the solstices, when the nights

The months here named are Mārgaśirsha, Pushya,—a rare substitute for Pausa,—and Māgha. I have, accordingly, corrected the Translator's "Āgrahāyaṇa, Māgha, and Phālguna (December—February)."

According to Āśwalāyana's Gṛihya-sūtra, II., IV., 1, the great aṣṭakās are four in number, coming in the frosty and the dewy seasons, that is to say, in Mārgaśirsha, Pausa, Māgha, and Phālguna. Śāṅkhāyana, in his Gṛihya-sūtra, recognizes but three. See Dr. Stenzler's Āśwalāyana, Part II., p. 71; also, Kullūka and Medhātithi on the Mānavadharmaśāstra, IV., 150.

and days alternately begin to diminish; on those days which are the anniversaries of the beginning of the Manwantaras; when the sun is in the path of the goat; and on all occurrences of meteoric phenomena.* A Śráddha at these seasons contents the Pitris for a thousand years: such is the secret which they have imparted. The fifteenth day of the dark half of the month Mágha, when united with the conjunction of the asterism over which Varuṇa presides (Śatabhishaj †), is a season of no little sanctity, when offerings are especially grateful to the progenitors. Food and water presented by men who are of respectable families, when the asterism Dhanishthá is combined with the day of new moon, content the Pitris for ten thousand years; whilst they repose for a whole ‡ age, when satisfied by offerings made on the day of new moon when Árdra is the lunar mansion. § from three anuvákas of the second Káthaka, denominated triñáchiketas;

the trimadhu, from three śiches, beginning with the words madhu váták;
and the trisuparñá, from three anuvákas, beginning with the words

Of the passage referred to the Káthaka I am unable to say anything at present. The three versicles opening with the words madhu váták appear first in the R̥igveda, as I., XC., 6-8; and they reappear in the White Yajurveda, as XIII., 27-29. The position of the Vaidik passage alleged to be connected with the trisuparñá has not been traced out.

The Nirńaya Sindhu explains the terms in a like manner, but calls the Trisuparńa, as well as the Trínáchiketa, prayers, portions of the Yajus. The Trimadhu it assigns to the Řich. Other explanations are also given to the terms Trínáchiketa and Trisuparńa; the first being explained a Brahman who thrice performs the ceremony called Chayana;† and the last, one who, after the seven ascending generations, worships the Pitris termed Somapas.‡ These explanations are, however, considered less correct than the preceding, and which are thus given in the authority cited: त्रिणाचिकेतस्त्रिसुपर्णो यजुर्वेदैकदेशौ तद्वतेन तदध्यायिनौ । * * * त्रिमधु ऋग्वेदैकदेशस्तदध्यायी ।

* The same doctrine is inculcated by the Váyu Purána:† but it appears to be a Pauráṇik innovation; for Manu places the Brahman intent on scriptural knowledge and on austere devotion on a level, and makes no mention of the Yogin. III., 134. ‡

† Cited thus, in the commentary:

आग्ने प्रीताः पुनः सोमं पितरो योगमाश्रिताः ।

Just before, the scholiast quotes the ensuing stanza,—sl. 939—from the Harivaṃśa:

एतेऽस्मत्पितरस्तात योगिनां योगवर्धनाः ।
आप्याययन्ति ये पूर्वं सोमं योगबलेन वै ॥

In these passages, the manes are represented as nourishing the moon by their devotion of yoga.

‡ ज्ञाननिष्ठा द्विजाः केचित्तपोनिष्ठास्तथापरे ।
तपःस्वाध्यायनिष्ठाश्च कर्मनिष्ठास्तथापरे ॥

Note referred to at pp. 178, 179, supra.

The names and functions of the post-vaiddik Viśve devas are set forth, in the Likhita-smṛiti, as follows:

ऋतुर्दक्षो वसुः सत्यः कालः कामो धुरिरोचनौ ।
पुरूरवा माद्रवाश्च विश्वे देवाः प्रकीर्तिताः ॥

* * * * *

इष्टिआग्ने ऋतुर्दक्षो वसुः सत्यश्च दैविके ।
कालः कामोऽग्निकार्येषु काम्येषु धुरिरोचनौ ।
पुरूरवा माद्रवाश्च पार्वणेषु नियोजयेत् ॥

Here the Viśve devas are said to be Kratu, Daksha, Vasu, Satya, Kāla, Kāma, Dhuri, Rochana, Purūravas, and Mādravas; ten, in all.

In Hemādri's Śrāddhakalpa, the Bṛihaspati-smṛiti is named as the source of these lines:

ऋतुर्दक्षो वसुः सत्यः कामः कालस्तथैव च ।
 ध्वनिश्च रोचनश्चैव तथा चैव पुरुरवाः ।
 आर्द्रवश्च दशैते तु विश्वे देवाः प्रकीर्तिताः ॥

As well as of these:

इष्टिश्चाद्वे ऋतुर्दक्षः सत्यो नान्दीमुखे वसुः ।
 नैमित्तिके कालकामौ काम्ये च ध्वनिरोचनौ ।
 पुरुरवा आर्द्रवश्चैव पार्वणे समुदाहृतौ ॥

This last extract, slightly varied, is, in the Śrāddhatattva, likewise credited to Bṛihaspati.

And the following verses are professedly taken, by Hemādri, from the Śankha-smṛiti:

इष्टिश्चाद्वे ऋतुर्दक्षः संकीर्त्यौ वैश्वदेविके ।
 नान्दीमुखे सत्यवसू काम्ये च धुरिरोचनौ ॥

But I can find nothing of the sort in Bṛihaspati and Śankha.

In the Agni-purāṇa, we read, according to Colebrooke's best MS., copied in the time of Akbar:

ऋतुर्दक्षो वसुः सत्यः कालः कामस्तथा ध्वनिः ।
 रोचकश्चाद्रवाश्चैव तथा चान्यः पुरुरवाः ।
 विश्वे देवा भवन्त्येते दश सर्वत्र पूजिताः ॥
 विश्वेदेवौ ऋतुर्दक्षौ सर्वास्त्रिष्टिषु विश्रुतौ ।
 नित्यं नान्दीमुखश्चाद्वे वसुसत्यौ च पैतृके ॥
 नवान्नालम्भने देवौ कामकालौ सदैव हि ।
 अपि कन्यागते सूर्ये चाद्वे वा ध्वनिरोचकौ ।
 पुरुरवाश्चाद्रवाश्च विश्वेदेवौ च पर्वणि ॥

The last half of this extract, slightly varied, is quoted in the Nirṇaya-sindhu, in Rāmakṛishṇa's Śrāddhagāṇapati, and in other works, as from the Āditya-purāṇa.

The ensuing enumeration is referred, in the Rājyābhishekapaddhati, to the Agni-purāṇa; but I have not been able to find it there:

ऋतुर्दक्षो वसुः सत्यः कामः कालो धुरिर्जयः ।
 पुरुरवा माद्रवाश्च विश्वे देवाश्च रोचनः ॥

Here the Viśve devas number eleven; the additional one being Jaya.

In the Nitimayūkha and Pūrtakamalākara, we meet with the subjoined verses, taken, perhaps, from the Vāsishtṥa-saṁhitā:

ऋतुर्दक्षो वसुः सत्यः कालः कामो मुनिस्तथा ।
 धृतिमान्मनुजश्चैव रोचमानस्तथैव च ।
 एते त्वामभिषिञ्चतु विश्वे देवास्तथा दश ॥

The name Muni, in the first line, looks exceedingly like a mere clerical error.

We read, further, in the Sárasangraha:

पुहूरवा माद्रवाश्च क्रतुर्दत्तौ पर्वज्ञयाः ।
नान्दिके वसुसत्तौ च काम्ये तु धुरिरोचनी ॥
कालकामी तु विज्ञेयौ वह्निकाये द्विजोत्तम ।
विश्वे देवाः समाख्याताः श्राद्धकर्मसु सर्वदा ॥

We have, thus, to choose between Dhuri, Dhvani, and Muni; between Rochana, Rochaka, Rochamána, and the Lochana of some MSS.; between Purúravas and Dhritimat; and between Mádravas, Ádravas, Ádrava, and Manuja. I incline to think that the मा-, in the reading पुहूरवा माद्रवाश्च, may have been corrupted out of आ-, and this out of अ. The Nirúayasindhu, like other treatises, in quoting the second passage which Hemádri refers to Bṛihaspati, and the extract from the Agni-purána, gives, instead of the immetrical पुहूरवा आर्द्रवश्चैव, and पुहूरवाश्चाद्रवाश्च, पुहूरवार्द्रवौ चैव. Possibly, this originated from पुहूरवोद्रवौ चैव, which yields, at all events, in lieu of two unintelligible names, two intelligible,—Purúravas and Ádrava. The termination of the unmeaning Mádravas and Ádravas was, perhaps, suggested by that of Purúravas.

The Váyu-purána, in my MSS., declares:

क्रतुर्दत्तः श्रवः सत्यः कालः कामो धुनिस्तथा ।
कुरुवानमवांश्चैव रोचमानश्च ते दश ।
धर्मपुत्राः स्मृता ह्येते विश्वायां जज्ञिरे शुभाः ॥

Here the Viśve devas, called sons of Dharma and Viśvá,—see Vol. II., pp. 21, 22,—are said to be ten in number, namely: Kratu, Daksha, Śrava, Satya, Kāla, Kāma, Dhuni, Kuruvat, Amavat, and Rochamána.

Śrava, possibly, here grew out of Vasn, with its consonants transposed. Dhuni, again, could easily be corrupted from Dhuri; or vice versa. See Vol. II., p. 23, note §. For Kuruvat it is obvious to propose Puruvát,—the original, perhaps, of the readings Purúravas and Dhritimat; as Amavat may have been of Ádravas, &c.

It is a suggestive fact, that none of the dozen or more law-books which I have examined for the Viśve devas refers to these verses,—the oldest, not impossibily, of all that are cited in this note. Is this omission to be accounted for by the desuetude of the Váyu-purána? And can that work be more ancient than the Likhita-smṛiti, in the form of it which has been derived to us?

Perhaps it was even some older work than the Váyu-purána that led Śankara—in his commentary on the Bṛihad-áraṇyaka Upanishad, I., IV., 12,—to count Viśvá's sons, the Viśve devas, at thirteen.

In the Harivamśa, śl. 11541–4, I make out, as the result of collating several MSS.:

विश्वे देवाश्च विश्वायां धर्मोद्भूता इति श्रुतिः ।
 दक्षश्चैव महाबाहुर्वसुश्च सुत एव च ॥
 सुधर्मा च महाबाहुः शङ्खपाञ्च महाबलः ।
 पृथुश्चैव महाबाहुर्वपुष्मांश्च तथैव च ॥
 चानुषस्य मनोरिंते तथानन्तमहारणौ ।
 विश्वावसुसुपर्वाणौ निष्कुम्भश्च महायशः ॥
 रुरुश्च ऋषिपुत्रो वै भास्करप्रमितद्युतिः ।
 विश्वेदेवान्देवमाता विश्वेश जनयत्सुतान् ॥

Here, subject to correction, I read the names of thirteen Viśve devas, to-wit: Daksha, Vasu, Suta, Sudharman, Śankhapād, Prīthu, Vapushmat, Ananta, Mahārāṇa, Viśwāvasu, Suparvan, Nishkumbha, and Ruru. The first seven are said to be connected with the Manu Chākshusha. Vide supra, p. 11.

It is alleged, by the Translator,—Vol. II., p. 22, note 1,—that there are twelve Viśve devas, according to the Matsya-purāṇa. The passage, in that work, which names these supernals,—but without numbering them,—is much too corrupt, in my MSS., to invite conjectural mending. For the most part, if not throughout, it has, without question, a close genetic relationship to the last extract transcribed.

CHAPTER XVI.

Things proper to be offered, as food, to deceased ancestors: prohibited things. Circumstances vitiating a Śráddha: how to be avoided. Song of the Pitṛis or progenitors, heard by Ikshwáku.

AURVA continued.—“Ancestors are satisfied, for a month, with offerings of rice or other grain,* with clarified butter,¹ with fish, or the flesh of the hare, of birds, of the hog, the goat, the antelope,† the deer,‡ the Gayal,§ or the sheep, or with the milk of the cow, and its products.² They are for ever satisfied with ¹ See Manu, III., 266, &c. The articles are much the same; the periods of satisfaction somewhat vary.

² The expression Gavya (गव्य) implies all that is derived from a cow: but, in the text, it is associated with ‘flesh’; and, as the commentator observes, some consider the flesh of the cow to be here intended: मांसमध्यपाठान्मांसमेवेत्यन्ये । || But this, he adds, relates to other ages. ¶ In the Kali or present age, it implies milk and preparations of milk.  The sacrifice of a cow or calf formed part of the ancient Śráddha. It then became typical; or, a bull was turned loose, instead of being slaughtered: and flesh (in general), and with that of the long-eared white goat,* in particular. The flesh of the rhinoceros, the Kálašáka (pot-herb), and honey are, also, especial sources of satisfaction to those worshipped at ancestral ceremonies. The birth of that man is the occasion of satisfaction to his progenitors, who perform, at the due time, their obsequial rites at Gayá. Grains that spring up spontaneously,† rice growing wild,‡ panic§ of both species (white or black||), vegetables that grow in forests,¶ are fit for ancestral oblations; as are barley, wheat, rice, sesamum, various kinds of pulse, and mustard.†† On the other hand, a this is still practised, on some occasions.†† In Manu, the term Gavya is coupled with others, which limit its application:

† Prasátiká. The scholiast says: प्रसातिका देवधान्यानि । आरण्याव्रीहिसदृशः । श्वेतशूका इति केचित् । Commentary A.

‡ नीवारा रक्तशूकाः । Commentary A. In the comment on the text of Vol. I., p. 95, nivára is defined आरण्या व्रीहयः.

|| So adds the commentator.

¶ Vanaushadhi.

 The original specifies priyanyu, mudga, nishpáva, and kovidára. Nishpáva is said, in one commentary, to be the same as valla; in the other, the same as śibya: and a gloss gives yugapatra as the synonym of kovidára. For these and other vegetable products named in this chapter, see the list in Vol. I., p. 95.

†† Unlike the list referred to in the preceding note, this does not profess to be exhaustive. In the former, we find the names of fourteen articles; in the latter, the names of twelve. This mentions five species of grains,—prasátiká, mudga, nishpáva, kovidára, and sarshapa,—omitted in the other; while the remaining seven species are common between both.

‡ See, for him, Book IV., Chapter I.

§ It is a village there, says the scholiast, from whom this parenthesis is borrowed. His words are: कलापो हिमवत्पार्श्ववर्ती ग्रामविशेषः । The village of Kalápa is mentioned in Book IV., Chapter IV., ad finem.

|| The words “of Bhádrapada and Mágha” correspond to वर्षासु च मघासु च, which means, “during the rainy season, and under the asterism Maghá.” Only one period, however, is intended; and that is during the month of Bhádrapada, according to the scholiast: वर्षासु । भाद्रपदे मघानक्षत्रे त्रयोदशीं प्राप्य । Compare note § to p. 170, supra.

¶ Gauri. In definition of this term, the commentator adduces, from some unnamed Smṛiti, the ensuing stanza:

अष्टवर्षा भवेन्नारी नववर्षा तु रोहिणी ।

दशवर्षा भवेत्कन्या अत ऊर्ध्वं रजस्वला ॥

It appears, herefrom, that gauri signifies a girl of eight years; rohiṇi, one of nine; and kanyā, one of ten; after which age, a female is to be considered as a woman.

With this the stanza which I have quoted from the Panchatantra, in p. 102, note *, supra, is unaccordant, as regards the rohiṇi.

For what seems to be intended for the above, cited in a corrupt and curtailed form by Vallabhagaṇi, see Goldstücker's Sanskrit Dictionary, sub voce अरजस्.

By its acceptance of the strains of the pitṛis, our text sanctions the marriage of a gauri. We have seen that this technicality is held to denote a maiden of eight; I nowhere find that it means a damsel more liberates a black bull,¹ or performs any domestic ceremony agreeable to rule, accompanied by donations to the Brahmans!"²*

¹ Nīla vṛisha. But this animal is not altogether, or always, black. In the Brahma Purāṇa, as quoted in the Nirṇaya Sindhu, † it is said to be of a red colour, with light face and tail, and white hoofs and horns; or, a white bull, with black face, &c.; or, a black bull, with white face, tail, and feet. ‡

² Very full descriptions of the Śrāddha occur in almost all advanced; and it may be doubted whether the compiler of the Vishṇu-purāṇa took a different notion of its import.

Kanyā—vide supra, pp. 102–105,—is often used in the vague sense of 'virgin'. Such may, then, be a gauri.

The commentator quotes, as follows, from the lawgiver Samvarta:

गौरीं ददन्नाकष्टं वैकुण्ठं याति रोहिणीम् ।

कन्यां ददद्ब्रह्मलोकं रौरवं तु रजस्वलाम् ॥

"He who gives away a gauri goes to Nākaprīṣṭha; he who gives away a rohiṇī, to Vaikuṇṭha; he who gives away a kanyā, to Brahmaloka; but he who gives away a damsel whose courses have commenced, to Raurava."

Nākaprīṣṭha is the highest heaven of the three specified. Raurava is a hell: see Vol. II., p. 216.

Ratnagarbha would have proved himself inconsistent indeed, if, while citing the two preceding stanzas with tacit approval, he had expressed himself as represented in note 2 to p. 101, supra.

* I find only this reading:

यजेत वाय्वमेधेन विधिवद्दक्षिणावता ।

This is to be rendered: "or offers a hippocaust accompanied by remuneration agreeably to rule."

† The Brahma-purāṇa is there quoted much to this effect. The Brahmaṇḍa-purāṇa—with many other authorities,—is adduced, by Hemādri, as follows:

लोहितो यस्तु वर्णेन मुखे पुच्छे च पाण्डुरः ।

श्वेतः खुरविषाणाभ्यां स नीलो वृष उच्यते ॥

चरणाश्च मुखं पुच्छं यस्य श्वेतानि गोपतेः ।

लाक्षारससवर्णस्य तं नीलमिति निर्दिशेत् ॥

‡ In the Āchārachandrikā, bulls of different colours are appropriated to different castes.

the Purāṇas,—especially in the Vāyu, Kūrma, Márkaṇḍeya, Vámana, and Garuḍa. The Matsya and Padma (Śrīṣṭī Khaṇḍa) contain descriptions which are much the same as that of the Vāyu. The accounts of the Brahma, Agni, and Varāha are less full and regular than in some of the others; and in none of them is the subject so fully and perspicuously treated as in our text. For satisfactory information, however, the Śráddha Mayúkha and the Nirṇaya Sindhu should be consulted.*

* The prime authority on the subject of obsequies is, beyond all question, the voluminous Śráddhakalpa of Hemādri,—a work which the Śráddhamayúkha and Nirṇayasindhu perpetually lay under contribution.

CHAPTER XVII.

Of heretics, or those who reject the authority of the Vedas: their origin, as described by Vasishtha to Bhishma: the gods, defeated by the Daityas, praise Vishnu: an illusory being, or Buddha, produced from his body.

PARÁŚARA.—Thus, in former days, spake the holy Aurva to the illustrious monarch Sagara, when he inquired concerning the usages proper to be practised (by mankind): and thus I have explained to you the whole of those observances against which no one ought to transgress.*

MAITREYA.—You have told me, venerable sir, that an ancestral rite is not to be looked upon by certain persons, amongst whom you mentioned such as were apostates. I am desirous to learn whom you intended by that appellation;† what practices bestow such a title upon a man; and what is the character of the individual to whom you alluded.

PARÁŚARA.—The Rig-, Yajur-, and Sáma-Vedas constitute the triple covering of the several castes; and the sinner who throws this off is said to be naked (or apostate).‡ The three Vedas are the raiment of all the orders§ (of men); and, when that is discarded, they are left bare.¹ On this subject hear what I heard my grandfather, the pious Vasishtha, relate to the magnanimous Bhishma:

There was, formerly, a battle between the gods and demons,* for the period of a divine year, in which the gods were defeated by the demons† under the command of Hráda.² The discomfited deities fled to the northern shore of the milky ocean,‡ where, engaging in religious penance, they thus prayed to Vishnú: “May

¹ This idea is expressed in nearly the same terms, in the Váyu Purána:

सर्वेषामेव भूतानां त्रयी संवरणं स्मृता ।

परित्यजन्ति ये मोहान्ते वै नग्नादयो जनाः ॥

“The three Vedas are the covering of all beings; and they who throw it off, through delusion, are called Nagnas, naked.” The notion is, probably, original with neither of the Puráṇas; and the metaphorical sense of the term is not that in which it was first employed: ascetics, whether of the Bauddha or of the Digambara order of Jains, being, literally, Nagnas,—or, going naked. The qualified application of it, however, was rendered necessary by the same practice being familiar to ascetics of the orthodox faith. To go naked was not necessarily a sign of a heretic; and, therefore, his nudity was understood to be, rejecting the raiment of holy writ. Thus, the Váyu Purána extends the word to all ascetics—including naked Brahmans,—who practise austerities fruitlessly, that is, heretically or hypocritically:

वृथादण्डी वृथामुण्डी वृथानमश्च यो द्विजः ।

वृथाव्रती वृथाजापी ते वै नग्नादयो जनाः ॥

“The Brahman who unprofitably bears a staff, shaves his head, goes naked, makes a vow, or mutters prayers,—all such persons are called Nagnas and the like.”

CHAPTER XVIII.

Buddha goes to the earth, and teaches the Daityas to condemn the Vedas: his sceptical doctrines: his prohibition of animal sacrifices. Meaning of the term Bauddha. Jainas and Bauddhas: their tenets. The Daityas lose their power, and are overcome by the gods. Meaning of the term Nagna. Consequences of neglect of duty. Story of Śatadhanu and his wife Śaibyā. Communion with heretics to be shunned.

PARÁŚARA.—After this, the great delusion,* having proceeded (to earth), beheld the Daityas, engaged in ascetic penances, upon the banks of the Narmadā river;¹ and, approaching them, in the semblance of a naked mendicant,† with his head shaven, and carrying a bunch of peacock's feathers,² he thus addressed them, in gentle accents: "Ho, lords of the Daitya race, wherefore is it that you practise these acts of penance?"

² A bunch of peacock's feathers is still an ordinary accompaniment of a Jaina mendicant. According to the Hindī poem, the Pṛithu Rai Charitra, it was borne by the Buddhist Amara Simha. But that work is not, perhaps, very good authority for Bauddha observances,—at least, of an ancient date.

Is it with a view to recompense in this world? or in another?" "Sage," replied the Daityas, "we pursue these devotions, to obtain a reward hereafter. Why should you make such an inquiry?"* "If you are desirous of final emancipation," answered the seeming ascetic,† "attend to my words; for you are worthy of a revelation‡ which is the door to ultimate felicity. The duties that I will teach you are the secret path to liberation: there are none beyond, or superior to, them.§ By following them you shall obtain either heaven or exemption from future existence. You, mighty beings, are deserving of such (lofty) doctrine." By such persuasions, and by many specious arguments,|| did this delusive being mislead the Daityas from the tenets of the Vedas; teaching, that the same thing might be for the sake of virtue and of vice; might be, and might not be; might, or might not, contribute to liberation; might be the supreme object,¶ and not the supreme object; might be effect, and not be effect; might be manifest, or not be manifest; might be the duty of those who go naked, or who go clothed in much raiment. And so the Daityas were seduced from their proper duties by the repeated lessons of their illusory preceptor, maintaining the equal truth of contradictory tenets;^{1*} and they were called Arhatas,² from the phrase he had employed, of “Ye are worthy (Arhatha) of this great doctrine,”—that is, of the false doctrines which he persuaded them to embrace.†

The foes of the gods‡ being, thus, induced to apostatize from the religion of the Vedas, by the delusive person (sent by Vishnú), became, in their turn, teachers of the same herèsies, and perverted others; and these, again, communicating their principles to others, by whom they were still further disseminated, the Ve-

¹ In this and the preceding contradictions it is probable that the writer refers, although not with much precision, to the sceptical tenets of the Jainas, whence they are called, commonly, Syádvádins, assertors of probabilities, or of what may be. These usually form seven categories, or: 1. a thing is; 2. it is not; 3. it is, and it is not; 4. it is not definable; 5. it is, but is not definable; 6. it is not, neither is it definable; 7. it is, and it is not, and is not definable. Hence the Jainas are also termed Saptavádins and Saptabhangins, assertors and oppugners of seven propositions. Asiatic Researches, Vol. XVII., p. 271;§ and Transactions of the Royal Asiatic Society, Vol. I., p. 555.||

² Here is further confirmation of the Jainas being intended by our text; as the term Arhat is, more particularly, applied to them, although it is also used by the Buddhists.

Then the same deluder, putting on garments of a red colour, assuming a benevolent aspect, and speaking in soft and agreeable tones, addressed others of the same family, and said to them: "If, (mighty) demons, you cherish a desire either for heaven or for final repose,* desist from the iniquitous massacre of animals (for sacrifice), and hear (from me what you should do). Know that all (that exists) is composed of discriminative knowledge.† Understand my words; for they have been uttered by the wise. This world subsists without support,‡ and, engaged in the pursuit of error, which it mistakes for knowledge, as well as vitiated by passion and the rest, revolves in the straits of existence." In this manner, exclaiming to them, "Know!" (Budhyadhvam), and they replying, "It is known" (Budhyate), these Daityas were induced, by the arch-deceiver, to deviate from their religious duties§ (and become Bauddhas), by his repeated arguments and variously urged persuasions.¹ When they had abandoned their own faith, they persuaded others to do the same: and the heresy spread; and many deserted the practices enjoined by the Vedas and the laws.

The delusions of the false teacher paused not with the conversion of the Daityas to the Jaina and Bauddha* heresies; but, with various erroneous tenets,† he prevailed upon others to apostatize, until the whole were led astray, and deserted the doctrines and observances inculcated by the three Vedas. Some then spake evil of the sacred books; some blasphemed the gods; some treated sacrifices and other devotional ceremonies with scorn; and others calumniated the Brahmaus. "The precepts," they cried, that lead to the injury of ¹ We have, therefore, the Bauddhas noticed as a distinct sect. If the author wrote from a personal knowledge of Buddhists in India, he could not have written much later than the tenth or eleventh century.

"Saying 'thus understand, understand, understand thus,' he, the deluder by illusion, caused the Daiteyas—i. e., sons of Diti—to forsake their own religion."

The commentary recognizes budhyata, not budhyate; as it says: एवं बुध्यतेत्यत्र पुनरुक्तिर्बौद्धपदनिरुक्त्यर्था । animal life (as in sacrifices,) are highly reprehensible. To say, that casting butter into flame is productive of reward, is mere childishness. If Indra, after having obtained godhead by multiplied rites, is fed upon the wood used as fuel in holy fire, he is lower than a brute, which feeds, at least, upon leaves. If an animal slaughtered in religious worship is, thereby, raised to heaven, would it not be expedient for a man who institutes a sacrifice to kill his own father for a victim? If that which is eaten by one, at a Śrāddha, gives satisfaction to another, it must be unnecessary for one who resides at a distance to bring food for presentation in person."¹* "First, then, let it be determined what may be (rationally) believed by mankind; and then," said their preceptor, "you will find, that felicity may be expected from my instructions. * Or Professor Wilson's collected essays, Vol. I. pp. 5—7.

Burnouf, evidently without looking at the original of the passage here rerendered, departs still further from its literal sense than Professor Wilson, for whose "arch-deceiver" (māyāmoha) he boldly substitutes Buddha: "Connaissez (budhyadhvam), s'écriait le Buddha aux Démons qu'il voulait séduire. Cela est connu (budhyatê), répondirent ses auditeurs." Introduction à l'Histoire du Bouddhisme Indien, Vol. I., note 1 in pp. 70, 71.

I subjoin Dr. Muir's translation of a metrical passage, quoted in the Sarvadarśanasangraha, purporting to represent the views of Bṛihaspati:

"There is no heaven, no final liberation, no soul [which continues to exist] in another world, nor any ceremonies of castes or orders which are productive of future reward.

"The Agnihotra sacrifice, the three Vedas, the mendicant's triple staff (tridāṇḍa), and the practice of smearing with ashes, are the means of livelihood ordained, by the Creator, for men who have neither understanding nor energy.

"If [it be true, that] an animal slaughtered at the Jyotishfoma sacrifice is [in consequence,] exalted to heaven, why does not the worshipper immolate his own father?

"If a śrāddha (offering of food to the manes) satiates even defunct creatures, it is quite superfluous to furnish people who are setting out upon a journey with any provisions; [as their friends who remain behind can offer food to them].

"Since [as you say,] persons in heaven are filled by oblations presented upon earth, why is not food similarly offered [by those below,] to people on the roof of the house?

"While a man does live, let him live merrily, let him borrow money, and swallow clarified butter. How can a body return to Earth, after it has once been reduced to ashes?

"If a man goes to another world, when he quits his body, why does not affection for his kindred impel him to come back?

"Hence, ceremonies for the dead are a mere means of livelihood devised by the Brāhmans, and nothing else.

"The three composers of the Veda were buffoons, rogues, and goblins. Every one has heard of jarbhari, turphari, and such other [nonsensical] exclamations of the Pandits.

"It is well known, that, in an aśwamedha (horse-sacrifice), the embraces of the horse must be received by the queen; and it is, in like manner, well known what other sorts of things, also, are to be grasped by those

When the Daityas had thus declined from the path of the holy writings, the deities took courage, and gathered together for battle. Hostilities, accordingly, were renewed; but the demons were now defeated and slain by the gods, who had adhered to the righteous path. The armour of religion, which had formerly protected the Daityas, had been discarded by them; and upon its abandonment followed their destruction.^{1*} buffoons. In the same way, the eating of flesh is prescribed by those goblins." Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, Vol. XIX., pp. 299—301.

Dr. Muir's learned and instructive notes must, for want of space, be omitted.

* The original of these two paragraphs has been more accurately rendered, by Dr. Muir, as follows: "The great Deceiver, practising illusion, next beguiled other Daityas by means of many other sorts of heresy. In a very short time, these Asuras (= Daityas), deluded by the Deceiver, abandoned the entire system founded on the ordinances of the triple Veda. Some reviled the Vedas; others, the gods; others, the ceremonial of sacrifice; and others, the Bráhmans. This [they exclaimed,] is a doctrine which will not bear discussion: the slaughter [of animals, in sacrifice,] is not conducive to religious merit. [To say, that] oblations of butter consumed in the fire produce any future reward, is the assertion of a child. If Indra, after having attained to godhead by numerous sacrifices, feeds upon śami and other woods, then an animal which eats leaves is superior to him. If it be a fact, that a beast slain in sacrifice is exalted to heaven, why does not the worshipper slaughter his own father? If a man is really satiated by food which another person eats, then śráddhas should be offered to people who are travelling abroad; and they, trusting to this, should have no need to carry any food along with them. After it has been settled, that this doctrine is entitled to credence, let the opinions which I express be pondered, and received as conducive to happiness. Infallible utterances do not, great Asuras, fall from the skies: it is only assertions founded on reasoning that are ac-

Thus, Maitreya, (you are to understand, that) those who have seceded from their original belief are said to be naked, because they have thrown off the garment of the Vedas. According to the law, there are four conditions (or orders of men of the three first castes),—the religious student, the householder, the hermit, and the mendicant.* There is no fifth state; and the unrighteous man who relinquishes the order of the householder, and does not become either an anchorite or a mendicant, is (also,) a naked (seceder). The man who neglects his permanent observances for one day and night, being able to perform them, incurs, thereby, sin for one day; and, should he omit them, not being in trouble, for a fortnight, he can be purified only by arduous expiation. The virtuous must (stop to) gaze upon the sun, after looking upon a person who has allowed a year to elapse without the observance of the cepted by me, and by other [intelligent] persons like yourselves. Thus, by numerous methods, the Daityas were unsettled by the great Deceiver; so that none of them any longer regarded the triple Veda with favour. When the Daityas had entered on this path of error, the deities mustered all their energies, and approached to battle. Then followed a combat between the gods and the Asuras; and the latter, who had abandoned the right road, were smitten by the former. In previous times, they had been defended by the armour of righteousness which they bore; but, when that had been destroyed, they, also, perished." Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, Vol. XIX., p. 302.

perpetual ceremonies; and they must bathe, with their clothes on, should they have touched him: but, for the individual himself, no expiation has been declared. There is no sinner, upon earth, more culpable than one in whose dwelling the gods,* progenitors, and spirits† are left to sigh, unworshipped. Let not a man associate, in residence, sitting, or society,‡ with him whose person, or whose house, has been blasted by the sighs of the gods, progenitors, and spirits. Conversation, interchange of civilities,§ or association|| with a man who, for a twelvemonth, has not discharged his religious duties, is productive of equality of guilt; and the person who eats in the house of such a man, or sits down with him, or sleeps on the same couch with him, becomes like him, instantaneously. Again; he who takes his food without showing reverence to the gods, progenitors, spirits, and guests, commits sin. How great is his sin! The Brahmans, and men of the other castes, who turn their faces away from their proper duties, become heretics, and are classed with those who relinquish pious works. Remaining in a place where there is too great an intermixture of the four castes is detrimental to the character of the righteous.

Men fall into hell, who converse with one who takes his food without offering a portion to the gods, the sages,* the manes, spirits, and guests. Let, therefore, a prudent person carefully avoid the conversation, or the contact, and the like, of those heretics who are rendered impure by their desertion of the three Vedas. She was devoted to her husband, benevolent, sincere, pure, adorned with every female excellence, with humility, and discretion.‡ The Raja and his wife daily worshipped the god of gods, Janárdana, with pious meditations, oblations to fire, prayers, gifts, fasting, and every other mark of entire faith, and exclusive devotion. On one occasion, when they had fasted on the full moon of Kárttika, and had bathed in the Bhágíráthí, they beheld, as they came up from the water, a heretic approach them, who was the friend of the Raja's military preceptor.§ The Raja, out of respect to the latter, entered into conversation with the heretic; but not so did the princess. In consequence of the fault committed by Śatadhanu, by speaking to an infidel, when he was engaged in a solemn fast, he was born again, as a dog. His wife was born as the daughter of the Raja of Kāśī, with a knowledge of the events of her preexistence, accomplished in every science,* and endowed with every virtue. Her father was anxious to give her, in marriage, to some suitable husband: but she constantly opposed his design; and the king was prevented, by her, from accomplishing her nuptials.† With the eye of divine intelligence, she knew that her own husband had been regenerate as a dog; and, going, once, to the city of Vaidiśā, she saw the dog, and recognized her former lord in him. Knowing that the animal was her husband, she placed upon his neck the bridal garland, accompanying it with the marriage-rites and prayers:‡ but he, eating the delicate food presented to him, expressed his delight, after the fashion of his species. In consequence of speaking to a heretic, after bathing in a sacred river, you have been condemned to this abject birth. Do you not remember it?" Thus reminded, the Raja recollected his former condition, and was lost in thought, and felt deep humiliation. With a broken spirit, he went forth from the city, and, falling dead in the desert, was born anew, as a jackal. In the course of the following year, the princess knew what had happened, and went to the mountain Koláhala, to seek for her husband. Finding him there, the lovely daughter of the king of the earth said to her lord, thus disguised as a jackal: "Dost thou not remember, O king, the circumstance of conversing with a heretic, which I called to thy recollection, when thou wast a dog?" The Raja, thus addressed, knew that what the princess had spoken was true, and, thereupon, desisted from food, and died. He then became a wolf; but his blameless wife knew it, and came to him in the lonely forest, and awakened his remembrance of his original state. "No wolf art thou," she said, "but the illustrious sovereign Śatadhanu. Thou wast then a dog, then a jackal, and art now a wolf." Upon this, recollecting himself, the prince abandoned his life, and became a vulture; in which form his lovely queen still found him, and aroused him to a knowledge of the past. The Raja was next born as a crow; when the princess, who, through her mystical powers, was aware of it, said to him: "Thou art now, thyself, the eater of tributary grain, to whom, in a prior existence, all the kings of the earth paid tribute."¹ Having abandoned his body, in consequence of the recollections excited by these words, the king next became a peacock, which the princess took to herself, and petted, and fed, constantly, with such food as is agreeable to birds of its class. The king of Káśí* instituted, at that time, the solemn sacrifice of a horse. In the ablutions with which it terminated,† the princess caused her peacock to be bathed; bathing, also, herself: and she then reminded Śata-dhanu how he had been successively born as various animals. On recollecting this, he resigned his life. He was, then, born as the son of a person of distinction;‡ and, the princess now assenting to the wishes of her father to see her wedded, the king of Káśí caused it to be made known, that she would elect a bridegroom from those who should present themselves as suitors

Of this country I know of no other notice. There are obvious objections to reading स भोगात्; and I find no lection संभोगात्.

‡ The text seems to point to some close connexion between Kāśī, Vaidiśā, and Videha. For Kāśī, see Vol. II., p. 163, notes 12 and ¶; and, for Videha, ibid., p. 165, notes 9 and ¶.

Vidiśā—perhaps intended by Vaidiśā,—is mentioned in Vol. II., p. 150, note 6. The word Vaidiśā may be due to the confounding, by ignorant or heedless copyists, of the i with the ai of old MSS. transcribed by them. Every one who has used such MSS., or has had to do with mediæval inscriptions, must have encountered, repeatedly, the particle वै so written as to be all but, if not quite, undistinguishable from वि, and vice versa. Perhaps the unjustifiable Triyāruṇa may now be accounted for: vide supra, foot of p. 37. Also see p. 158, note ††; and Burnouf's Introduction, &c., Vol. I., p. 86, note 2, on Viśālā and Vaiśālī.

Such, Maitreya, is the sin of conversing with a heretic, and such are the expiatory effects of bathing after the solemn sacrifice of a horse,† as I have narrated them to you. Let, therefore, a man carefully avoid the discourse or contact of an unbeliever, especially at seasons of devotion, and when engaged in the performance of religious rites preparatory to a sacrifice.‡ If it be necessary that a wise man should look at the sun, after beholding one who has neglected his domestic ceremonies for a month, how much greater need must there be of expiation, after encountering one who has wholly abandoned the Vedas, one who is supported by infidels, or who disputes the doctrines of holy writ? Varadarāja's citations and references are careless in the extreme. To the source of the extract which he professes to take from the Rāmāyaṇa a clue is indicated by the verses wrongly attributed to the Moksha-dharma; and the line which he assigns to the Mitāksharā is the very passage of the Vishnū-purāṇa to which this note is appended.

These, Maitreya, are the persons called naked, the meaning of which term you desired to have explained. Their very looks vitiate the performance of an ancestral oblation: speaking to them destroys religious merit for a whole day. These are the unrighteous heretics to whom a man must not give shelter,† and speaking to whom effaces whatever merit he may, that day, have obtained. Men, indeed, fall into hell, as the consequence of only conversing with those who unprofitably‡ assume the twisted hair and shaven crown; with those who feed without offering food to gods, spirits, and guests;§ and those who are excluded from the presentation of cakes and libations of water to the manes.

In his Essays, Analytical, &c., Vol. I., pp. 5–7, Professor Wilson has given an account of the measures which he took, in India, towards preparing the materials that served as the basis of his Analyses of the Purāṇas, a series of papers ultimately abandoned unfinished. Under his oversight, we read, “indices were drawn up in Sanskrit. To convert them into English, I employed several native young men, educated in the Hindu College, and well conversant with our language; and to them the Pandits explained the summary which they had compiled. The original and translation were examined by myself, and corrected wherever necessary. When any particular article appeared to promise interest or information, I had that translated in detail, or translated it myself; in the former case, revising the translation with the original."

From among all the works thus dealt with, none was the object of greater care than the Vishnú-purána. Of this a very large part was thought worthy of unabridged reproduction in English. Out of the scattered portions left untranslated, the longest occurs in the Book here completed, embracing Chapters VIII.—XVIII.

This being an appropriate place for a general note, and it being of interest to know the relation of the present version to that made in India, I shall here add a few specimens of the latter,—now the property of the India Office Library,—indicating the locality of the corresponding passages in the former.

BOOK IV.

CHAPTER I.

Dynasties of kings. Origin of the solar dynasty from Brahmá. Sons of the Manu Vaivaswata. Transformations of Ilá or Sudyumna. Descendants of the sons of Vivaswat: those of Nedishtha. Greatness of Marutta. Kings of Vaiśálí. Descendants of Śaryāti. Legend of Raivata: his daughter Revatí married to Balaráma.

MAITREYA.—Venerable preceptor, you have explained to me the perpetual and occasional ceremonies which are to be performed by those righteous individuals who are diligent in their devotions; and you have, also, described to me the duties which devolve upon the several castes, and on the different orders of the human race. I have now to request you will relate to me the dynasties (of the kings who have ruled over the earth).¹

¹ The complete series of the different dynasties is found elsewhere only in the Váyú, the Brahmánda (which is the same), the Matsya, and the Bhágavata Puráñas. The Brahma Purána and the Hari Vaṁśa, the Agni, Linga, Kúrma, and Garudá Puráñas have lists of various extent, but none beyond the families of Pándú and Kíshná. The Márkaṇdeya contains an account

PARĀŚARA.—I will repeat to you, Maitreya, an account of the family of Manu, commencing with Brahmá, and graced by a number of religious, magnanimous,* and heroic princes. Of which it is said: "The lineage of him shall never be extinct, who daily calls to mind the race of Manu, originating with Brahmá."¹ Listen, therefore, Maitreya, to the (entire) series† of the princes of this family, by which all sin shall be effaced.

Before (the evolution of) the mundane egg, existed Brahmá, who was Hiraṇyagarbha, the form of (that supreme) Brahma which consists of Vishṇu as identical with the Rig-, Yajur-, and Sáma-‡ (Vedas); the primeval, uncreated cause§ of all worlds. From the right thumb of Brahmá was born the patriarch Daksha:² his daughter was Aditi, who was the mother|| of of a few of the kings of the solar dynasty alone; and the Padma, of a part of the solar and lunar princes only, besides accounts of individuals. In the Rámáyāṇa, Mahábhárata, and in the other Purāṇas, occasional short genealogies and notices of individual princes occur. In general, there is a tolerable conformity: but this is not invariably the case; as we shall have occasion to observe.

² Daksha is elsewhere said to have been one of the mind-born sons of Brahmá, or to have been the son of the Prachetasas. See Vol. II., p. 9, note 1.

the Sun.* The Manu (Vaivaswata) was the son of the celestial luminary; and his sons¹ were Ikshwáku,

¹ According to the nomenclature sometimes followed, and, as we shall have reason to conclude, intended in this place, there are ten sons of Manu. The commentator regards them, however, as but nine; considering Nábhága-nedishtha but one name, or, Nedishtha the father of Nábhága.† The number is generally stated to be nine; although there is some variety in the names, particularly in this name, which occurs Nabhágadishta, Nábhá-gárishtha;‡ and also separated, as Nábhága, Nabhaga, or Nabhága; Nedishtha, Dishtha, and Arishtha: the latter, as in the Kúrma, distinctly stated, नाभागो ह्यरिष्टः । Again, नेदिष्ठः सप्तमः स्मृतः । Brahma Purána. The commentator on the Hari Vamśa quotes the Vedas for Nábhágadishtha: नाभागदिष्टं वै मानवमिति श्रुतेः ।§ But the name occurs as Nábhánedishtha in the Aitareya Bráhmaṇa of the Rígveda, where|| a story is told of his being excluded from all share of his inheritance, on the plea of his being wholly devoted to a religious life: नाभानेदिष्टं वै मानवं ब्रह्मचर्यं वसन्तं भ्रातरो निरभजन् । See, also, Asiatic Researches, Vol. VIII., p. 384.¶ The name, as ordinarily written, Na-bhága, ‘no-share,’ has, nevertheless, an obvious connexion with the legend. The Padma Purāṇa, in the Pātāla Khaṇḍa, says there were 'ten,'‡‡ and names them Ikshwāku, Nṛiga, Dishṭa, Dhṛishṭa, Karúsha, Śaryāti, Narishyanta, Pṛishadhra, Nábhāga, and Kavi.

|| This seems to have been mistaken for Nahava, into which one of Professor Wilson's MSS. corrupts Nahusha, itself an error for Nabhaga.

¶ But see note ††, below.

 Śl. 3140—3142. The last person of this group is called, in the text, the tenth; and Nílakaṇṭha, the commentator, says, of him: चतुर्था-न्नाभागादन्योऽयं नाभागरिष्टो दशमः। We are to understand, then, by नाभागेत्त्वाकुं, not one name, but an irregular combination of two.

†† The commentator Arjuna Miśra here reads Veṇu.

‡‡ And so says the Bhāgavata-purāṇa,—IX., I., 11, 12,—which gives the same names, save Nabhaga for Nábhāga. At VIII., XIII., 2, 3, it has, among ten names, both Nabhaga and Nábhāga, omitting Nṛiga; and it puts Vasumat for Kavi. Vide supra, p. 14, note *.

Like our text at pp. 13, 14, supra, the Mārkaṇḍeya-purāṇa, LXXIX., 11, 12, says that the Manu had nine sons: Ikshwāku, Nabhaga, Dhṛishṭa, Śaryāti, Narishyanta, Nábhāga, Dishṭa, Karúsha, and Pṛishadhra. The Calcutta edition of the Mārkaṇḍeya-purāṇa has, here, such bad readings as Śarmāti, Kurúsha, and Prushadhru. See, likewise, the same Purāṇa, CXI., 4, 5.

In the Harivaṃśa, 613, 614, the names, in the best MSS., are, substantially, as in the Mārkaṇḍeya-purāṇa; except that, instead of Nábhāga and Dishṭa, we find Prámśu and Nábhāgarishṭa, with the variant Daṇḍa and Nedishṭha. Further, Dhṛishṇu is a common substitute for its synonym Dhṛishṭa.

Before their birth, the Manu, being desirous of sons, offered a sacrifice* (for that purpose,) to Mitra and Varuṇa; but, the rite being deranged, through an irregularity of the ministering priest, a daughter, Ilā,† was produced.¹ Through the favour of the two divinities,

¹ तत्रापङ्गते होतुरपचारादिला नाम कन्या बभूव । “That sacrifice being wrongly offered, through the improper invocations of the Hotri,” &c.‡ It is also read अपहृते, ‘frustrated.’ This is rather a brief and obscure allusion to what appears to be an ancient legend, and one that has undergone various modifications.§

The Vāyu-purāṇa has two several lists of the sons of the Manu. The first names Ikshwāku, Nabhaga, Dhṛishṇu, Śaryāti, Narishyanta, Nābhāga Arishṭa, Karūsha, Pṛishadhra, and Prāmśu; the second, Ikshwāku, Nabhaga, Dhṛishṭa, Śaryāti, Narishyanta, Prāmśu, Nābhāga Arishṭa, Karūsha, and Pṛishadhra.

As each of these lists distinctly states that it reckons up only ten persons, we are to find but one in नाभागोऽरिष्टः, which stands, here, in lieu of the more ordinary नाभागारिष्टः.

See the preceding page, note ; also, p. 240, note , and p. 256, note *, infra.

* Ishti.

† See the references in note * to p. 236, infra; also, Professor Wilson’s Translation of the Rigveda, Vol. I., p. 82, note a.

‡ It is to this effect that the passage is to be understood, if we read अपहृते, which lection the commentator prefers: तस्मिन्कर्मणि मनुपत्या कन्यार्थं प्रार्थितस्य होतुरपचारात्कन्यासंकल्परूपात् । अपहृते विकले जाति सति कन्याभूत् । He adds: अपहृतेरिति पाठेऽपहृष्टाद्वोमाद्वेतोरित्यर्थः । I nowhere find Professor Wilson’s reading अपहृते.

§ Premising the names of the Manu’s ten sons, the Bhāgavata-purāṇa, IX., I., 13—16, says, as translated by Burnouf:

“Avant leur naissance, quand le Manu n’avait pas encore d’enfants, le bienheureux Vasichṭha, ce puissant sage, avait célébré le sacrifice de Mitra et de Varuṇa, pour lui donner des fils.

“Alors Çradhdhâ, la femme du Manu, qui s’était soumise au vœu du lait, s’étant rendue auprès de l’officiant, se jeta à ses pieds, et le supplia de lui donner une fille.

“Mais à l’instant où le Brâhmane faisant les fonctions d’officiant, however, (her sex was changed, and) she became a man, named Sudyumna. At a subsequent period, in con-

According to the Matsya, no change of sex took place, in the first instance. The eldest son of Manu was Ída or Íla (इड or इल), whom his father appointed sovereign of the seven Dwipas. In his progress round his dominions, Íla came to the forest of Śám-bhu or Śíva; entering into which, he was changed to a female, Ílá, agreeably to a promise made, formerly, by Śíva to Párvatí,—who had been, once, unseasonably broken in upon by some sages,*—that such a transformation should be inflicted on every male who trespassed upon the sacred grove. After a season, the brothers of Íla sought for him, and, finding him thus metamorphosed, applied to Vasishthá, their father's priest, to know the cause. He explained it to them, and directed them to worship Śíva and his bride. They did so, accordingly; and it was announced, by the deities, that, upon the performance of an Aśwamedha by Ikshwáku, Íla should become a Kímpurusha, named Sudyumna, and that he should be a male one month, and a female another month, alternately. The Váyú, which is followed by most of the other authorities, states, that, upon Manu's offering their share of the sacrifice to Mitra and Varuṇa, instead of a boy, a girl was born; according to the Vedas: इडा जज्ञे इति श्रुतिः । Manu desired her to follow him:

तामिलेत्यथ होवाच मनुर्दण्डधरः स्मृतेः ।

अनुगच्छामि भद्रं ते तमिला प्रत्युवाच ह ॥

Whence her name Ílá (from íla or ída, 'come'). There, however, Manu propitiates Mitra and Varuṇa; and the girl Ílá is sequence of (becoming subject to the effects of) a malediction once pronounced by Śiva,* Sudyumna was changed into the boy Ila, or Sudyumna, by their favour: as the Márkaṇḍeya:†

तथेति ताभ्यामुक्तं तु देवाभ्यां सैव कन्यका ।

इला इलः समभवत्सुबुध्न इति विश्रुतः ॥

Sudyumna's subsequent change to a female again is told much as in the Matsya; but his being alternately male and female is not mentioned in the Vāyu, any more than it is in our text. The Bhāgavata agrees, in that respect, with the Matsya; but it has, evidently, embellished the earlier part of the legend, by the introduction of another character, Śraddhā, the wife of the Manu. It is said, that it was by her instigation,—as she was desirous of having a girl,—that the ministering Brahmans altered the purpose of the rite; in consequence of which a girl, instead of a boy, was born. The similarity of the name has induced the learned author of the Origin of Pagan Idolatry to conceive that he has found the Ila of the Hindus in the Il or Ilus of the Phœnicians. “The Phœnician Il is the masculine Ila of the Hindoos and Indo-Scythæ; and Ila was a title of Menu or Buddha, who was preserved in the ark, at the time of the deluge.” Vol. I., p. 156. And he thence concludes, that Ila must be Noah; whilst other circumstances in his Phœnician history identify him with Abraham. Vol. I., p. 159. Again: “Ilus or Il * * is a regular Cuthic name of Buddha, which the Phœnicians, I have no doubt, brought with them from their settlements on the Erythræan sea: for Buddha or Menu, in the character of Ila, is said to have married his own daughter, Ila, who is described as the offspring of an ancient personage that was preserved in an ark, at the time of the general deluge.” Vol. I., p. 223. Now, whatever connexion there may be between the names of Ila, Il, Ilus, Ilium, Ilā ‘the earth,’ and Ilos ‘slime,’ there is no very obvious resemblance between the Paurāṇik legends of Ilā and the Mosaic record; nor do the former authorize the particulars of Ila stated by Mr. Faber, on the authority, probably, of Colonel Wilford. The Manu Satyavrata, who was preserved in the ark, is never called Ila; nor is he the father of Ilā. Buddha was not so preserved; nor is Ila ever a title of Buddha. Budha (not Buddha), the husband of Ilā, never appears as her father; nor is he a Manu; nor is she the daughter of any ancient personage preserved in an ark. There is not, therefore, as far as I am aware, any circumstance in the history of Ila or Ilā which can identify him either with Abraham or Noah.

Thus it is indicated, observes the commentator, that the Solarian race sprang from the Lunarian.

In consequence of his having been, formerly, a female, Sudyumna was excluded from any share in his paternal dominions: but his father, at the suggestion of Vasishthá, bestowed upon him the city Pratishthána;² and he gave it to Purúravas.†

¹ The Matsya calls the name of the third, Haritáśwa; the Váyu, &c., Vinatáśwa; the Márkaṇḍeya,‡ Vinaya; and the Bhágavata,§ Vimala. All but the last agree in stating that Utkala (Orissa) and Gayá (in Behar) are named after the two first. The Matsya calls the third the sovereign of the east, along with the Kauravas; the Váyu makes him king of the west.|| The Bhágavata calls them, all three, rulers of the south.¶

M. Langlois had, ‡ no doubt, सुतत्रयः in his copy; as he renders it: § ‘Il donna * * * naissance à trois enfants;’ though, as he observes, Hamilton|| had called these the sons of Ikshwāku. The Brahma Purāna has not this passage; nor does the commentator on the Hari Vamśa give any explanation: neither does anything of the kind occur elsewhere. We have, however, subsequently, in the text, ¶ Daṇḍa named as a son of Ikshwāku; and, in the Padma Purāna, Śrīṣṭi Khaṇḍa, and in the Uttara Kāṇḍa of the Rāmāyaṇa, we have a detailed narrative of Daṇḍa, the son of Ikshwāku, whose country was laid waste by an imprecation of Bhārgava, whose daughter  that prince had violated. His kingdom became, in consequence, the Daṇḍaka forest. The Mahābhārata, Dāna Dharma, †† alludes to the same story. If, therefore, the preferable reading of the Hari Vamśa be Suta, ‘son,’ it is at variance with all other authorities. At the same time, it

† Śl. 637.

‡ Since he puts “Dandaca”, a word of three syllables, it is more than probable that he followed some such reading as दण्डकश्चेति ते त्रयः, which I find to be the most ordinary. In some MSS., दण्डश्चेति सुतास्त्रयः occurs. The lection हतत्रयः is of no account. It seems like a corruption of the last syllables of दण्डश्चेतीह ते त्रयः, which is read in one of Professor Wilson’s MSS.

must be admitted, that the same work is singular in asserting any collision between Dańda and his brothers and Sudyumna; and the passage seems to have grown out of that careless and ignorant compilation which the Hari Vamśa so perpetually presents. It is, not improbably, a gratuitous perversion of this passage in the Matsya:

नाभागस्याम्बरीषस्तु धृष्टस्य च सुतत्रयम् ।

‘Ambarísha was the son of Nábhága;† and Dhṛishṭa had three sons.’‡

¹ This story has been modified, apparently, at different periods, according to a progressive horror of the crime. Our text simply states the fact. The Váyu says he was hungry, and not only killed, but ate, the cow of his spiritual preceptor, Chyavana. In the Márkańdeya, § he is described as being out a hunting, and killing the cow of the father of Bábhavya, mistaking it for a Gavaya or Gayal. The Bhágavata, || as usual, improves upon the story, and says that Príshadhra was appointed, by his Guru, Vasishṭha, to protect his cattle. In the night, a tiger made his way into the fold; and the prince, in his haste, and in the dark, killed the cow upon which he had fastened, instead of the tiger. In all the authorities, the effect is the same; and the imprecation of the offended sage degraded Príshadhra to the caste of a Śúdra. According to the Bhágavata, the prince led a life of devotion, and, perishing in the flame of a forest, obtained final liberation. The obvious purport of this legend, and of some that follow, is, to account for the origin of the different castes from one common ancestor.

 The verse, as I find it, runs:

नाभागोऽरिष्टपुत्रस्तु विद्वानासीद्भलन्दनः ।

That is to say, Bhalandana is declared to be son of 'Nábhága Arishtha.'

The purport of the verse is, manifestly, to set forth the paternity of Bhalandana. Besides this, not to increase the Váyu-purāna's tale of the Manu's sons from nine to ten, Nábhága Arishtha must be taken together, as denoting one person. The sense would not be changed, while the grammar would be amended, by reading नाभागारिष्ट°,—yielding Nábhágárishtha,—which, as we have seen, occurs elsewhere. Vide supra, p. 232, notes  and ‡‡; also, p. 256, note *, infra.

Dishā. According to that authority, he became a Vaiśya by his actions. The other Purāṇas generally agree, that the descendants of this person became Vaiśyas; but the Matsya and Vāyu do not notice it. The Márkaṇḍeya details a story of Nábhāga's carrying off and marrying the daughter of a Vaiśya; in consequence of which he was degraded, it is said, to the same caste, and deprived of his share of the patrimonial sovereignty, which his son and successor recovered. The Brahma Purāṇa and Hari Vamśa† assert, that two sons of Nábhāgarishā again became Brahmans: but the duties of royalty imply the Kshatriya caste of his posterity; and the commentator on our text observes,‡ that the son of Nábhāga was born before his father's degradation, and, consequently, the race continued Kshatriya;—an assertion unsupported by any authority: and it must, therefore, appear, that a race of Vaiśya princes was recognized by early traditions.

† Where (for a single instance out of several,) Prámśu—p. 232, supra,—is called one of the “sons” of Manu, are we to understand, by “sons”, “descendants”? Or is the Prámśu here spoken of a second person of that name? He was one of twelve sons of Vatsapri, according to the Márkańdeya-purāna, CXVIII., 1, 2.

According to the Váyu-purāna, Prámśu was son of Bhalandana:

CHAPTER II.

Dispersion of Revata's descendants: those of Dhṛishṭa: those of Nábhága. Birth of Ikshwáku, the son of Vaivaswata; his sons. Line of Vikukshi. Legend of Kakutstha; of Dhundhumára; of Yuvanáswa; of Mándhātṛi: his daughters married to Saubhari.

PARÁŚARA.—Whilst Kakudmin, surnamed Raivata, was absent on his visit to the region of Brahmá, the (evil spirits or) Rákshasas named Puńyajanas* destroyed his capital, Kuśasthalí. His hundred brothers, through dread of these foes, fled in different directions; and the Kshattriyas, their descendants, settled in many countries.^{1†}

From Dhṛishṭa, the son of the Manu, sprang the Kshattriya race‡ of Dhárshṭaka.²

¹ According to the Váyu, the brothers of Raivata founded a celebrated race called Śáryáta, from Śáryáti. The Brahma Purána says, they took refuge in secret places (gahana); for which the Hari Vamśa substitutes (parvata gańa) mountains. The Váyu has neither, and says, merely, that they were renowned in all regions: विख्याता दिनु सवासु ।

² So the Váyu, Linga, Agni, Brahma, and Hari Vamśa. § The Matsya names three sons of Dhṛishṭa,—Dhṛishṭaketu, Chitránátha, and Rańadhṛishṭa. The Bhágavata || adds, that the sons of Dhṛi-

The son of Nabhága* was Nábhága;† his son was sh́ta obtained Brahmanhood upon earth, though born Kshattriyas:

धृष्टाद्वार्ष्टमभूत्तत्र ब्रह्मभूयं गतं चितौ । †

† But who is Nabhága? For, as above observed, (p. 231, note 1,) the son of the Manu is Nabhága-nedish́ta;‡ and there is, in that case, no such person as Nabhága.§ On the other hand, if Nabhága and Nedish́tha|| be distinct names, we have ten sons of Váivaswata, as in the Bhágavata.¶ The descendants of Nedish́tha, through his son Nabhága, have been already specified; and, after all, therefore, we must consider the text as intending a distinct

* This is the ordinary reading of my MSS., of which three, however, give Nábhága. It will contribute to harmonize the Vishnú-purāna with itself, if we surmise,—vide supra, p. 13,—that there is, here, an error for Nabhaga. So Ambarisha's grandfather is called in the Bhágavata-purāna, IX., IV., 1; though the person there meant is, as the context evidences, identified with Nábhágedish́tha of the Aitareya-bráhmana. The Váyu-purāna, likewise, in every MS. to which I have access, irregularly derives Nábhága from Nabhaga:

नभगस्य च दायादो नाभागो नाम वीर्यवान् ।

Those Purānas which speak of Nedish́tha (or Dish́ta, &c.) preceded by Nábhága, in composition or apart, and also speak of Nabhaga (or Nabhága), recounting, of the latter, the story told in note 1, above, have explicitly misrepresented ancient tradition, inasmuch as this story relates to Nábhágedish́tha (नेदिष्ठ preceded by नाभा = नाभौ), in whose name we have the source of Nábhágedish́tha and numerous other corruptions previously particularized. There seems to be no authority, older than epic and Paurānik, for such a person as Nedish́tha, or Dish́ta, or Arish́ta, father of a Nábhága.

† The Váyu-purāna has:

धृष्टस्य धार्ष्टकं तत्र रणधृष्टं बभूव ह ।

त्रिसाहस्रं तु स गणः क्षत्रियाणां महात्मनाम् ॥

‡ This should be Nábhága-nedish́tha.

§ See the conjecture ventured in note *, above. Also vide supra, p. 232, text and note *; and the Translator's last note on Chapter V. of the present Book. But the Bhágavata-purāna, IX., II., 17, 18, gives an irreconcilable account of the offspring of Nṛiga.

person by the name Nabhága; and such a name does occur, in the lists of the Agni, Kúrma, Matsya, and Bhágavata, unquestionably distinct from that with which it is also sometimes compounded. The Bhágavata repeats the legend of the Aitareya Bráhmaña,† with some additions, and says, that, Nabhága having protracted his period of study beyond the usual age, his brothers appropriated his share of the patrimony. On his applying for his portion, they consigned their father to him, by whose advice he assisted the descendants of Angiras in a sacrifice, and they presented him with all the wealth that was left at its termination. Rudra claimed it as his; and, Nabhága acquiescing, the god confirmed the gift, by which he became possessed of an equivalent for the loss of territory. Most of the authorities recognize but one name here, variously read either Nabhága or Nábhága, the father of Ambarísha. The Váyú, as well as the Bhágavata, concurs with the text.‡

¹ The Bhágavata§ considers Ambarísha as a king who reigned, apparently, on the banks of the Yamuná. He is more celebrated as a devout worshipper of Vishnú, whose discus protected him from the wrath of Dúrvásas, and humbled that choleric saint, who was a portion of Śiva:—a legend which, possibly, records a struggle between two sects, in which the votaries of Vishnú, headed by Ambarísha, triumphed.

² The Agni, Brahma, and Matsya stop with Ambarísha. The Váyú and Bhágavata proceed as in the text; only the latter|| adds, to Virúpa, Ketumat and Śam̐bhu.

¹ The same verse is cited in the Váyu, and affords an instance of a mixture of character, of which several similar cases occur subsequently. ‡ Kshattriyas by birth become Brahmans by profession; and such persons are usually considered as Angirasas, followers or descendants of Angiras, who may have founded a school of warrior-priests. This is the obvious purport of the legend of Nabhága's assisting the sons of Angiras to complete their sacrifice, referred to in a former note;§ although the same authority has devised a different explanation. The son of Śrávasta was Bríhadaśwa,* whose son was Kuvalayáśwa.† This prince, inspired with the spirit of Vishnú, destroyed the Asura Dhundhu, who had harassed the pious sage‡ Uttanka;§ and he was, thence, entitled Dhundhumára.¹ In his conflict with the demon,

It is, there, also called Dharmapattana, being a city of some sanctity, in the estimation of the Buddhists. It is termed, by Fa-Hian, She-wei; by Hwan Tsang, She-lo-va-si-ti; and placed, by both, nearly in the site of Fyzabad in Oude. Account of the Foe-kúe-ki.

¹ This legend is told, in much more detail, in the Váyú and Brahma Purāṇas. Dhundhu hid himself beneath a sea of sand, which Kuvalayáśwa and his sons dug up,—undeterred by the flames which checked their progress,—and finally destroyed most of them. The legend originates, probably, in the occurrence of some physical phenomenon, as an earthquake, or volcano.

* According to the Váyú-purāṇa, like our text, he had a most numerous family:

बृहदश्वस्य पुत्राणां सहस्राष्टिकविंशतिः ।

† The Váyú-purāṇa has Kuvaláśwa:

बृहदश्वसुतस्यापि कुवलाश्व इति श्रुतिः ।

And from several passages that follow this it is evident that the name is Kuvaláśwa. The Harivaṃśa, śl. 671, etc., likewise has Kuvaláśwa; and so has the Linga-purāṇa. ‡ Maharshi.

the king was attended by his sons, to the number of twenty-one thousand; and all these, with the exception of only three, perished in the engagement, consumed by the fiery breath of Dhundhu. The three who survived were Dṛidhás̥wa, Chandrás̥wa,* and Kapilás̥wa;† and the son and successor of the elder of these‡ was Haryaś̥wa:§ his son was Nikumbha; his son was Saṁhataś̥wa;|| his son was Kṛiśás̥wa; his son was Prasenajit; and his son was (another) Yuvanás̥wa.¹

¹ The series of names agrees very well to Saṁhataś̥wa, called Barhaṇás̥wa in the Bhāgavata. ¶ We have, there, some variations, and some details not noticed in our text. The Vāyu, Brahma, Agni, Linga, Matsya, and Kūrma ascribe two sons to Saṁhataś̥wa, whom the two first name Kṛiśás̥wa and Akṛiśás̥wa, and the rest, Kṛiśás̥wa and Rañás̥wa. Senajit†† or Prasenajit‡‡ is, generally, though not always, termed the son of the younger brother; but the commentator§§ on the Hari Vaṁśa calls him the son of Saṁhataś̥wa, whilst the Matsya, Agni, Linga, and Kūrma omit him, and make Mándhātṛi the son of Rañás̥wa.||| The mother of Prasenajit and the wife of Akṛiśás̥wa or Saṁhataś̥wa,—according to the different interpretations,—was the daughter of Himavat,

* In the Vāyu-purāṇa the name is Bhadrás̥wa.

† The Bhāgavata-purāṇa, IX., VI., 24, has Dṛidhás̥wa, Kapilás̥wa, and Bhadrás̥wa.

‡ The original here again names Dṛidhás̥wa, but says nothing of his seniority: दृढाश्वाइयः ।

§ The Linga-purāṇa, Prior Section, LXV., 37, interposes Pramoda between Dṛidhás̥wa and Haryaś̥wa.

The wife of Yuvanāśwa, according to the Vāyu, or of Prasenajit, according to the Brahma, was Gaurī, the daughter of Rantinara, † who, incurring the imprecation of her husband, became the Bāhudā river (Vol. II., p. 142, note 3). The Brahma and Hari Vamśa ‡ call Yuvanāśwa her son; but, in another place, § the Hari Vamśa contradicts itself, calling Gaurī the daughter of Matināra, || of the race of Puru, the mother of Māndhātṛī; here following, apparently, the Matsya, in which it is so stated. The Brahma Purāṇa is not guilty of the inconsistency. The Vāyu of course gives the title to Māndhātṛī, with the addition, that he was called Gaurika, after his mother:

तस्यास्तु गौरिकः पुत्रश्चक्रवर्ती बभूव ह ।

मान्धाता यौवनाश्वो वै त्रैलोक्यविजयी नृपः ॥

Māndhātṛī's birth from Gaurī is the more remarkable, as it is incompatible with the usual legend, given in our text and in the Bhāgavata, which seems, therefore, to have been of subsequent origin, suggested by the etymology of the name. In the Bhāgavata, ¶ Māndhātṛī is also named Trasaddasyu, or "the terrifier of thieves."

In his search, he came to the water in the jar, which had been sanctified and endowed with prolific efficacy* by sacred texts, and he drank it. When the Munis† rose, and found that the water had been drunk, they inquired who had taken it, and said: “The queen‡ that has drunk this water shall give birth to a mighty and valiant son.” “It was I,” exclaimed the Raja, “who unwittingly drank the water:” and, accordingly, in the belly of Yuvanáswa was conceived a child. And it grew; and in, due time, it ripped open the right side of the Raja, and was born: and the Raja did not die. Upon the birth of the child, “Who will be its nurse?” said the Munis; when (Indra,) the king of the gods appeared, and said, “He shall have me for his nurse” (mám ayaín dhásyati); and, hence, the boy was named Mándhátří. Indra put his fore-finger into the mouth of the infant, who sucked it, and drew from it (heavenly) nectar.§ And he grew up, and became a mighty monarch,|| and reduced the seven continental zones under his dominion. Saubhari, the sage, being disturbed, in his devotions, by their sports, contemplated the patriarchal felicity of the monarch of the lake, and reflected: "How enviable is this creature, who, although born in a degraded state of being, is ever thus sporting cheerfully amongst his offspring and their young! Of a truth, he awakens, in my mind, the wish to taste such pleasure; and I, also, will make merry amidst my children."‡ Having thus resolved, the Muni came up, hastily, from the water, and, desirous of entering upon the condition of a householder, went to Mándhātṛi, to demand one of his daughters as his wife. As soon as he was informed of the arrival of the sage, the king rose up from his throne, offered him the customary libation,§ and treated him with the most profound respect. Having taken a seat, Saubharisaid to the Raja: "I have determined to marry. Do you, king, give me one of your daughters, as a wife. earth to whom daughters have been born; but your family is, above all, renowned for observance of liberality in your donations to those who ask your bounty. You have, O prince, fifty daughters. Give one of them to me; that so I may be relieved from the anxiety I suffer through fear that my suit may be denied."

When Mándhātṛi heard this request, and looked upon the person of the sage, emaciated by (austerity and) old age, he felt disposed to refuse his consent: but, dreading to incur the anger and imprecation of the holy man, he was much perplexed, and, declining his head, was lost awhile in thought. The Ṛishi, observing his hesitation, said: "On what, O Raja, do you meditate? I have asked for nothing which may not be readily accorded. And what is there that shall be unattainable to you, if my desires be gratified by the damsel whom you must needs give unto me?" To this, the king, apprehensive of his displeasure,* answered and said: "Grave sir, it is the established usage of our house to wed our daughters to such persons only as they shall, themselves, select from suitors of fitting rank; and, since this your request is not yet made known to my maidens, it is impossible to say whether it may be equally agreeable to them as it is to me. This is the occasion of my perplexity; and I am at a loss what to do." This answer of the king was fully understood by the Ṛishi, who said to himself: "This is merely a device of the Raja, to evade compliance with my suit. He has reflected that I am an old man, having no attractions for women, and not likely to be accepted by any of

And he then spake aloud, and said: "Since such is the custom, mighty prince, give orders that I be admitted into the interior of the palace.† Should any of the maidens, your daughters, be willing to take me for a bridegroom, I will have her for my bride. If no one be willing, then let the blame attach alone to the years that I have numbered."‡ Having thus spoken, he was silent.

Mándhatri, unwilling to provoke the indignation§ of the Muni, was, accordingly, obliged to command the eunuch to lead the sage into the inner chambers; who, as he entered the apartments, put on a form and features of beauty far exceeding the personal charms of mortals, or even of heavenly spirits.|| His conductor, addressing the princesses, said to them: "Your father, young ladies, sends you this pious sage,¶ who has demanded of him a bride; and the Raja has promised him, that he will not refuse him any one of you who shall choose him for her husband." When the damsels heard this, and looked upon the person of the Rishi, they were equally inspired with passion and desire, and, like a troop of female elephants disputing

And what am I to do now? What is it that I have said? And, at last, although with extreme reluctance, he was obliged to agree that the Ŗishi should marry all his daughters.

Having then wedded, agreeably to law, all the princesses, the sage took them home to his habitation, where he employed the chief of architects, Viśwakarma,—equal, in taste and skill, to Brahmā himself,‡—to construct separate palaces for each of his wives: he ordered him to provide each building with elegant couches, and seats, and furniture, and to attach to them gardens and groves, with reservoirs of water, where the wild-duck and the swan should sport amidst beds

After some period had elapsed, the heart of King Mándhātí yearned for his daughters; and he felt solicitous to know whether they were happily circumstanced. Setting off, therefore, on a visit to the hermitage of Saubhari, he beheld, upon his arrival, a row of beautiful crystal palaces, shining as brilliantly as the rays of the sun, and situated amidst lovely gardens and reservoirs of pellucid water. Entering into one of these magnificent palaces, he found and embraced a daughter, and said to her, as the tears of affection and delight trembled in his eyes: “Dear child, tell me how it is with you. Are you happy here, or not? Does the great sage treat you with tenderness? Or do you revert, with regret, to your early home?” The princess replied: “You behold, my father, how delightful a mansion I inhabit,—surrounded by lovely gardens and lakes, Why, then, should I call to memory the place of my birth?† To your favour am I indebted for all that I possess. I have only one cause of anxiety, which is this: my husband is never absent from my dwelling; solely attached to me, he is always at my side; he never goes near my sisters; and I am concerned to think that they must feel mortified by his neglect: this is the only circumstance that gives me uneasiness."

Proceeding to visit another of his daughters, the king, after embracing her, and sitting down, made the same inquiry, and received the same account of the enjoyments with which the princess was provided. There was, also, the same complaint, that the Rishi was wholly devoted to her, and paid no attention to her sisters. In every palace Mándhatri heard the same story, from each of his daughters, in reply to his questions; and, with a heart overflowing with wonder and delight, he repaired to the wise Saubhari, whom he found alone, and, after paying homage to him, thus addressed him: "Holy sage, I have witnessed this thy marvellous power. The like miraculous faculties I have never known any other to possess. How great is the reward of thy devout austerities!" Having thus saluted the sage, and been received, by him, with respect, the Raja resided with him for some time, partaking of the pleasures of the place, and then returned to his capital.

In the course of time, the daughters of Mándhátí bore to Saubhari a hundred and fifty sons; and, day by day, his affection for his children became more intense, and his heart was wholly occupied with the sentiment of self.¹ "These my sons," he loved to think, "will charm me with their infant prattle; then they will learn to walk; they will, then, grow up to youth, and to manhood; I shall see them married, and they will have children; and I may behold the children of those children." By these and similar reflections, however, he perceived that his anticipations every day outstripped the course of time; and, at last, he exclaimed:* "What exceeding folly is mine!† There is no end to my desires. Though all I hope should come to pass for ten thousand or a hundred thousand years, still new wishes would spring up. When I have seen my infants walk; when I have beheld their youth, their manhood, their marriage, their progeny; still my expectations are unsatisfied, and my soul yearns to behold the de-

I have, at last, discovered, that there is no end to hope, until it terminates in death; and that the mind which is perpetually engrossed by expectation can never be attached to the supreme spirit. My mental devotions, whilst immersed in water, were interrupted by attachment to my friend the fish. The result of that connexion was my marriage; and insatiable desires are the consequences of my married life. The pain attendant upon the birth of my single body is now augmented by the cares attached to fifty others, and is further multiplied by the numerous children whom the princesses have borne to me.* The sources of affliction will be repeatedly renewed by their children, and by their espousals, and by their progeny, and will be infinitely increased: a married life is a mine of individual anxiety.† My devotions, first disturbed by the fish of the pool, have since been obstructed by temporal indulgence; and I have been beguiled by that desire for progeny which was communicated to me by association with Saímada.‡ Separation from the world called Hárítas. They were sons of Angiras, and Brahmans with the properties of Kshattriyas.' The Bhágavata‡ has only: मान्धा-तृप्रवरा इमे । These (Ambarisha, Purukutsa, and Harita,) were, according to Śrídharma Swámin's comment, the chiefs of Mándhâtří's descendants; being founders of three several branches: or it may mean, he says, merely that they had Mándhâtří for their progenitor; Mándhâtří being, by some, also named Angiras, according to Áśwaláyana.§ It may be questioned if the compilers of the Puráṇas, or their annotators, knew exactly what to make of this and similar phrases,|| although they were, probably, intended to intimate, that some persons of Kshattriya origin became the disciples of certain Brahmans, particularly of Angiras, and, afterwards, founders of schools of religious instruction, themselves. Mándhâtří himself is the author of a hymn in the Ríg-veda. Asiatic Researches, Vol. VIII., p. 385.¶ Háríta is the name of an individual were sixty millions in number, had defeated the tribes of the Nāgas (or snake-gods), and seized upon their most precious jewels, and usurped their dominion. Deprived of their power by the Gandharvas, the serpent-chiefs addressed the god of the gods, as he awoke from his slumbers; and the blossoms of his lotos-eyes opened, while listening to their hymns.* They said: "Lord, how shall we be delivered from this great fear?" Then replied the first of males,† who is without beginning: "I will enter into the person of Purukutsa, the son of Māndhātṛi, the son of Yuvanāśwa; and in him will I quiet these iniquitous Gandharvas." On hearing these words, the snake-gods bowed and withdrew, and, returning to their country, despatched Narmadā, to solicit the aid of Purukutsa.¹

In Vol. II., p. 75, it is the Apsaras that spring from Kaśyapa and Muni; the Gandharvas being the offspring of Kaśyapa and Arishá.

Narmadā accordingly went to Purukutsa, and conducted him to the regions below the earth,‡ where, being filled with the might of the deity, he destroyed the Gandharvas. He then returned to his own palace; and the snake-gods, in acknowledgement of Narmadā's services, conferred upon her, as a blessing, that, who-sage, considered as the son of Chyavana, and to whom a work on law is attributed. It is, probably, rather that of a school, however, than of an individual.

Defend me from the serpent's poison."† Whoever repeats this, day and night, shall never be bitten by a snake, in the dark, or in entering a chamber; nor shall he who calls it to mind, when he eats, suffer any injury from poison, though it be mixed with his food. To Purukutsa, also, the snake-gods announced, that the series of his descendants should never be cut off.

Purukutsa had a son, by Narmadá, named Trasadasyu,‡ whose son was Sambhúta,¹§ whose son was ¹ We have some varieties here. Instead of Trasadasyu, the Matsya has Dussaha, whom it makes the husband of Narmadá, and father of Sambhúti, the father of Tridhanwan. The Bhágavata|| omits Sambhúti; the Linga¶ makes him the brother of Trasadasyu; and the Agni has, in his place, Sudhanwan.

As Anaraṇya is famous in Hindu story,†† and Trayyāruṇa‡‡ is a contributor to the Rīg-veda, their omission shows careless compilation.

Saṁbhūti is, thus, provided with two sons, Vishṇuvriddha—founder of the Vishṇuvriddhas,—and Anaraṇya.

¹ The Vāyu states, he was banished, by his father, for his wickedness (Adharma). The Brahma Purāṇa and Hari Vaṁśa¶ detail his iniquity at length; and it is told more concisely in the Linga. He carried off the betrothed wife of another man;—one of the citizens, according to the two former; of Vidarbha, according to the latter. For this, his father, by the advice of Vasishṭha, banished him; and he took refuge with Śwapākas. The Rāmāyaṇa has a different story, and ascribes Triśanku's degradation to the curse of the sons of Vasishṭha, to whom the king had applied to conduct his sacrifice, after their father had refused to do so. Before that, he is described†† as a pious prince (सत्यवादी जितेन्द्रियः); and the object of his sacrifice was to ascend to heaven.

pleased with him, elevated him, in his living body, to heaven.¹

¹ The occurrence of the famine, and Satyavrata's care of the wife and family of Viśwāmītra, are told, with some variations, in the Vāyu, which has been followed by the Brahma and Hari Vamśa.* During the famine, when game fails, he kills the cow of Vasishthā; and, for the three crimes of displeasing his father, killing a cow, and eating flesh not previously consecrated, he acquires the name of Triśanku (tri, 'three', śanku, 'sin').† Va-sishthā refusing to perform his regal inauguration, Viśwāmītra celebrates the rites, and, on his death, elevates the king, in his mortal body, to heaven. The Rāmāyaṇa relates the same circumstance, but assigns to it a different motive,—Viśwāmītra's resentment of the refusal of the gods to attend Triśanku's sacrifice. That work also describes the attempt of the gods to cast the king down upon earth, and the compromise between them and Viśwāmītra, by which Triśanku was left suspended, head downwards, in mid-air, forming a constellation in the southern hemisphere, along with other new planets and stars formed by Viśwāmītra. The Bhāgavata‡ has an allusion to this legend, saying that Triśanku is still visible in heaven:

* Śl. 724, et seq. See Original Sanskrit Texts, Part I., pp. 86—88.

† Triśanku—"he of three delinquencies,"—was so called, according to the commentator on the Vishṇu-purāṇa, because he ate what was unhallowed, slew his spiritual teacher's cow, and disobeyed his father's commands: अत्रोक्षितभक्षणगुरुधनुवधपित्राज्ञालङ्घनरूपैस्त्रिभिः शङ्क-भिरिव हृदियथाहेतुभिस्त्रिशङ्कसंज्ञामवाप । Then follows a quotation of the Harivaṃśa, śl. 748, 749:

Both my copies leave a blank, where it is marked; and a similar passage does not elsewhere occur: but the word should, probably, be निशा; and the whole may be thus rendered: "Men acquainted with the Purāṇas recite these two stanzas: 'By the favour of Viśwāmitra, the illustrious Triśanku shines in heaven, along with the gods, through the kindness of that sage. Slowly passes the lovely night in winter, embellished by the moon, decorated with three watches, and ornamented with the constellation Triśanku.' " This legend is, therefore, clearly astronomical, and alludes, possibly, to some reformation of the sphere by Viśwāmitra, under the patronage of Triśanku, and in opposition to a more ancient system advocated by the school of Vasishṭha. It might be no very rash conjecture, perhaps, to identify Triśanku with Orion, the three bright stars of whose belt may have suggested the three Śankus (stakes or pins) which form his name.‡

stated, that he resides in the court of Indra, to which he was elevated for his performance of the Rājasūya sacrifice, and for his unbounded liberality. This seems to have served as the groundwork of the tale told in the Márkaṇḍeya* and Padma Purāṇas, of his having given his whole country, his wife and son, and, finally, himself, to Viśwāmītra, in satisfaction of his demands for Dakṣhiṇā. In consequence, he was elevated, with his subjects, to heaven, from whence, having been insidiously led, by Nārada, to boast of his merits, he was again precipitated. His repentance of his pride, however, arrested his downward descent; and he and his train paused in mid-air. The city of Hariśchandra is popularly believed to be, at times, still visible in the skies. The indignation of Vasishṭha at Viśwāmītra's insatiableness produced a quarrel, in which their mutual imprecations changed them to two birds, the Śarālī (a sort of Turdus,) and the Baka (or crane). In these forms they fought for a considerable term, until Brahmā interposed, and reconciled them. The Bhāgavata alludes to this story, in its notice of Hariśchandra; but the Vāyu refers the conflict to the reign of a different prince: vide supra, p. 261, note 2. According to the Śiva Purāṇa, Hariśchandra was an especial worshipper of that deity; and his wife Satyavatī was a form of Jayā, one of Durgā's handmaids.

² The Asiatic nations generally shave the head, either wholly, or in part. Amongst the Greeks, it was common to shave the fore part of the head; a custom introduced, according to Plutarch, by the Abantes,—whom Homer|| calls ὀπίθεν κομώοντες,—and followed, according to Xenophon, by the Lacedæmonians. It may be doubted, however, if the Greeks or Ionians ever shaved the head completely. The practice prevails amongst the Moham-medans; but it is not universal. The Śakas (Scythians, or Tartars) shave the fore part of the head, gathering the hair at the back into a long tail, as do the Chinese. The mountaineers of the Himálaya shave the crown of the head, as do the people of Kaferistán, with exception of a single tuft. What oriental people wore their hair long, except at the back of the head, is questionable; and the usage would be characteristic rather of the Teutonic and Gothic nations. The ancient Persians had long bushy

† In the Vāyu-purāṇa and Harivaṃśa, he is called simply Vidarbha.

‡ The following genealogy is given in the Rāmāyaṇa, Bāla-kāṇḍa, LXX., 19—37: Brahmā, Marichi, Kaśyapa, Vivaswat, Manu, Ikshwāku (first king of Ayodhyā), Kukshi, Vikukshi, Bāṇa, Anaraṇya, Pṛithu, Triśanku, Dhundhumāra, Yuvanāśwa, Māndhātṛi, Susandhi, Dhruvasandhi (with Prasenajit), Bharata, Asita, Sagara. The same detail is found in the Ayodhyā-kāṇḍa, CX., 5—24.

In the Bengal recension of the Rāmāyaṇa, Ādi-kāṇḍa, LXXII., Angiras and Prachetas intervene between Kaśyapa and Manu, Vivaswat being omitted; as is Kukshi, also.

The Ayodhyā-kāṇḍa, CXIX., in the same recension, names, somewhat discrepantly: Brahmā, Marichi, Kaśyapa,—and then, a break being announced,—Vivaswat, Manu, Ikshwāku, Kukshi, Vikukshi, Reṇu, Pushya, Anaraṇya, Pṛithu, Triśanku, Dhundhumāra, Yuvanāśwa, Māndhātṛi, Susandhi, Dhṛitasandhi (with Prasenajit), Bharata, Asita, Sagara.

Most of this is very different from what we meet with in the Purāṇas.

The son of Asamanjas was Ām-śumat.

Asamanjas was, from his boyhood, of very irregular conduct. § His father hoped, that, as he grew up to manhood, he would reform; but, finding that he continued guilty of the same immorality, Sagara abandoned him. Do thou, then, assume a visible form,† for the protection of the afflicted universe." "Be satisfied", replied the sage: "in a brief time, the sons of Sagara shall be, all, destroyed."

At that period, Sagara commenced the (performance of the solemn) sacrifice of a horse, who was guarded by his own sons: nevertheless, some one stole the animal, and carried it off into a chasm in the earth. Sagara commanded his sons to search for the steed; and they, tracing him by the impressions of his hoofs, followed his course, with perseverance, until, coming to the chasm where he had entered, they proceeded to enlarge it, and dug downwards, each, for a league.‡ Coming to Pátála, they beheld the horse wandering freely about; and, at no great distance from him, they saw the Rishi Kapila sitting, with his head declined in meditation,§ and illuminating the surrounding space with radiance as bright as the splendours of the autumnal sun shining in an unclouded sky.|| Exclaiming "This

When Sagara learned that his sons whom he had sent in pursuit of the (sacrificial) steed had been destroyed by the might of the great Rishi Kapila, he despatched Anśumat, the son of Asamanjas, to effect the animal's recovery. The youth, proceeding by the (deep) path which the princes had dug, arrived where Kapila was, and, bowing respectfully,* prayed† to him, (and so propitiated him), that the saint said: "Go, (my son), deliver the horse to your grandfather; and demand a boon. Thy grandson shall bring down the river of heaven‡ (on the earth)." Anśumat requested, as a boon, that his uncles§ who had perished through the sage's displeasure|| might, although unworthy of it, be raised to heaven, through his favour. "I have told you," replied Kapila, "that your grandson shall bring down upon earth the Ganges (of the gods); and, when her waters shall wash the bones and ashes of thy grandd'ennemi], ce sage identifié avec l'Esprit suprême, qui dirigea ici-bas le solide vaisseau de la doctrine Sâṅkhya, à l'aide duquel l'homme désireux de se sauver traverse le redoutable océan de l'existence, ce chemin de la mort?"

A tolerably full account of Kapila will be found in my edition of the Sāṅkhya-sāra, Preface, pp. 13—21. Several things, however, are to be corrected there; as the work was sent out, by the Asiatic Society of Bengal, without my authority, and while I was known to be still employed on what would have made ten or twelve pages of additional matter, including various readings of MSS. collated since I left India, besides minute indexes and numerous emendations. The copies of the Daśa-rūpa in circulation are similarly unamended and imperfect.

Having acknowledged, reverentially, the kindness of the sage, Aínsumat returned to his grandfather, and delivered to him the horse.† Sagara, on recovering the steed, completed his sacrifice, and, in affectionate memory of his sons, denominated Ságara the chasm which they had dug.¹‡

¹ Ságara is still the name of the ocean, and, especially, of the Bay of Bengal, at the mouth of the Ganges. On the shore of the island called by the same name, tradition places a Kapilás-rama, or hermitage of Kapila, which is still the scene of an annual pilgrimage. Other legends assign a very different situation for the abode of the ascetic, or, the foot of the Himālaya, where the Ganges descends to the plains.§ There would be no incompatibility, however, in the two sites, could we imagine the tra-

Nala, however, as we shall hereafter see, is some twenty generations later than Rītuparṇa, in the same family; and the Vāyu, therefore, thinks it necessary to observe, that two Nalas are noticed in the Purāṇas, and the one here adverted to is the son of Vīrasena:

नलौ द्वाविति विख्यातौ पुराणेषु दृढव्रतौ ।
वीरसेनात्मजश्चैव यश्चेत्त्वाकुकुलोद्भवः ॥

whilst the other belongs to the family of Ikshwāku. The same passage occurs in the Brahma Purāṇa and Hari Vaṁśa;† and the commentator‡ on the latter observes: निषधात्मजो नलो वीरसे- नसुतात्मजोऽन्यः । 'Nala the son of Nishadha is different from Nala the son of Vīrasena.' It is, also, to be observed, that the Nala of the tale is king of Nishadha, and his friend Rītuparṇa is king of Ayodhyā. The Nala of the race of Ikshwāku is king of Ayodhyā; he is the son of Nishadha, however; and there is, evidently, some confusion between the two. We do not find Vīrasena, or his son, in any of the lists. Vide infra, p. 320, note 1.

¹ The Váyu, Agni, Brahma, and Hari Vamśa read Amitrasaha, 'foe-enduring;' § but the commentator on our text explains it Mitra, a name of Vasishtha, Saha, 'able to bear' the imprecation of; || as in the following legend, which is similarly related in the Bhāgavata. ¶ It is not detailed in the Váyu. A full account occurs

* The Bhāgavata-purāṇa, IX., IX., 18, says that he was called Kalmāshānghri, also. This is a synonym of Kalmāshapāda, for which epithet vide infra, p. 308.

† In the Harivaṁśa, śl. 817, Sarvakarman appears as son of Mitrasaha. In the next two stanzas, the names of his successors are: Anaraṇya, Nighna, Anamitra (and Raghu, his brother), Duliduha, Dilipa.

‡ Vide infra, p. 313, note 1.

§ The first and fourth works named have—as has, also, the Linga-purāṇa, Prior Section, LXVI., 27,—नास्त्रा मित्रसहः; the second and third, राजा मित्रसहः. The words of our text are सौदासी मित्रसहनामा; and here, but for the commentary, there is just as good reason as there is in the other instances, to infer that the name is Amitrasaha. The momentary indignation of Saudāsa against Vasishtha justifies but ill the supposition that the term amitra, 'enemy', was applied to the latter. The Bhāgavata-purāṇa, IX., IX., 18, in its आङ्गमित्रसहं यं, reads Mitrasaha, unmistakably; and so does the Mahābhārata, Ādi-parvan, śl. 6720; Āśwamedhika-parvan, śl. 1690.

In Dr. Goldstücker's Sanskrit Dictionary there is, however, an article अमित्रसह, which word there points to our king, "also called Saudāsa: according to the Vāyu-, Agni-, Brahma-Pur. and the Harivaṁśa; the Vishṇu-Pur. calls him Mitrasaha." Were not these particulars taken from the note under annotation? Even a reference to so accessible a work as the Harivaṁśa would have suggested a doubt of there being such a name as Amitrasaha.

|| The commentator's words are: मित्रं वसिष्ठं प्रतिशप्तुं समर्थोऽपि सहते स्म। तेन मित्रसहनाम। This imports, that Mitrasaha was so called, because, though he had it in his power to retaliate, in kind, the curse of his friend (mītra), namely, Vasishtha, he forbore (sahate sma, from sah).

The son of Sudāsa, having gone into the woods to hunt, fell in with a couple of tigers, by whom the forest had been cleared of the deer.* The king slew one of these tigers with an arrow. At the moment of expiring, the form of the animal was changed, and it became that of a fiend† of fearful figure and hideous aspect.

in the Mahābhārata, Ādi Parvan, s. 176, but with many and important variations. Kalmāshapāda, whilst hunting, encountered Śaktri,‡ the son of Vasishṭha, in the woods, and, on his refusing to make way, struck the sage with his whip. Śaktri cursed the king to become a cannibal; and Viśwāmītra, who had a quarrel with Vasishṭha, seized the opportunity to direct a Rākshasa to take possession of the king, that he might become the instrument of destroying the family of the rival saint. Whilst thus influenced, Mitrasaha, a Brahman, applied to Kalmāshapāda for food; and the king commanded his cook to dress human flesh, and give it to the Brahman, who, knowing what it was, repeated the curse of Śaktri, that the king should become a cannibal; which taking effect with double force, Kalmāshapāda began to eat men. One of his first victims was Śaktri, whom he slew and ate, and then killed and devoured, under the secret impulse of Viśwāmītra's demon, all the other sons of Vasishṭha. Vasishṭha, however, liberated him from the Rākshasa who possessed him, and restored him to his natural character. The imprecation of the Brahman's wife, and its consequences, are told, in the Mahābhārata, as in the text; but the story of the water falling on his feet appears to have grown out of the etymology of his name, which might have referred to some disease of the lower extremities; the prince's designation being, at length, Mitrasaha Saudāsa Kalmāshapāda, or, 'Mitrasaha, son of Sudāsa, with the swelled feet.'

Its companion, threatening the prince with its vengeance, disappeared.

After some interval, Saudása celebrated a sacrifice, (which was conducted by Vasishtha). At the close of the rite, Vasishtha went out; when the Rákshasa, the fellow of the one that had been killed in the figure of a tiger, assumed the semblance of Vasishtha, and (came and) said (to the king): "Now that the sacrifice is ended, you must give me flesh to eat. Let it be cooked; and I will presently return." Having said this, he withdrew, and, transforming himself into the shape of the cook, dressed some human flesh, which he brought to the king, who, receiving it on a plate of gold, awaited the reappearance of Vasishtha. As soon as the Muni returned, the king offered to him the dish. Vasishtha, surprised at such want of propriety* in the king, as his offering him meat to eat, considered what it should be that was so presented, and, by the efficacy of his meditations, discovered that it was human flesh. His mind being agitated with wrath, he denounced a curse upon the Raja, saying: "Inasmuch as you have insulted all such holy men† as we are, by giving me what is not to be eaten, your appetite shall, henceforth, be excited by similar food."

"It was yourself," replied the Raja to the (indignant) sage, "who commanded (this food to be prepared)." "By me!" exclaimed Vasishtha. "How could that have been?" And, again having recourse to meditation,‡

he detected the whole truth. Foregoing, then, all displeasure towards the king,* he said: "The food (to which I have sentenced you) shall not be your sustenance for ever: it shall (only) be so for twelve years." The king, who had taken up water in the palms of his hands, and was prepared to curse the Muni, now considered that Vasishṭha was his spiritual guide,† and, being reminded,‡ by Madayantí, his queen, that it ill became him to denounce an imprecation upon a holy teacher who was the guardian divinity of his race,§ abandoned his intention.|| Unwilling to cast the water upon the earth, lest it should wither up the grain,—for it was impregnated with his malediction,—and equally reluctant to throw it up into the air, lest it should blast the clouds, and dry up their contents, he threw it upon his own feet.¶ Scalded by the heat which the water had derived from his angry imprecation, the feet of the Raja became spotted black and white;  and he, thence, obtained the name of Kalmásha-páda, or he with the spotted (kalmásha) feet (páda).††

At the expiration of the period of his curse, Saudása returned home. Being reminded of the imprecation of the Brahmani, by his wife, Madayantí, he abstained from conjugal intercourse, and was, in consequence, childless; but, having solicited the interposition of Vasishtha, Madayantí became pregnant.† The child, however, was not born for seven years, when the queen, (becoming impatient), divided the womb with a (sharp) stone, and was thereby delivered. The child was, thence, called Ásmaka (from Ásman, ‘a stone’). The son of Ásmaka was Múlaka, who, when the warrior tribe was extirpated upon earth, was surrounded and concealed by a number of females;‡ whence he was denominated Nárikavacha (having women for armour).¹ The son of Múlaka was Daśaratha; his son

¹ His name, Múlaka, or ‘the root’, refers, also, to his being the stem whence the Kshattriya races again proceeded. § It may be doubted if the purport of his title Nárikavacha is accurately explained by the text. ||

Having, thus, acquired the friendship of the deities in heaven, they desired him to demand a boon. He said to them: "If a boon is to be accepted by me, then tell me, as a favour, what is the duration of my life." "The length of your life is but an hour,"§ the gods replied. Paraśurāma is here intended, according to Śrīdhara, in his comment on the parallel passage in the Bhāgavata-purāṇa,—IX., IX., 40. Two verses, which, it may be conjectured, closely correspond, in a correct reading, to the stanza quoted in the preceding extract, appear in the Linga-purāṇa, Prior Section, LXVI., 29.

* Not one of my MSS. has this name. Four give Ilivila; others, Iḍavila and Ailavila. The Vāyu-purāṇa reads, in different MSS., Iḍaviḍa, Iḍiviḍa, and Aiḍiviḍa; the Linga-purāṇa, Ilavila; the Bhāgavata-purāṇa, Aidaviḍa. Compare the variants noticed in p. 246, note *, supra.

† The Linga-purāṇa interpolates Vṛiddhaśarman before Viśwasaha.

‡ This name is frequently and variously corrupted, especially into Kaṭwānga and Khatwānga. It does not seem necessary to dwell on these deprivations.

scended, in his easy-gliding chariot, to the world of mortals. Arrived there, he prayed, and said: "If my own soul has never been dearer to me than (the sacred) Brahman; if I have never deviated from (the discharge of) my duty; if I have never regarded gods, men, animals, vegetables, all created things,* as different from the imperishable;† then may I, with unswerving step, attain to that divine being on whom holy sages meditate!" Having thus spoken, he was united with that supreme being,‡ who is Vāsudeva; with that elder§ of all the gods, who is abstract existence,|| and whose form cannot be described. Thus he obtained absorption, according to this stanza, which was repeated, formerly, by the seven Ŗishis: "Like unto Khatwānga will be no one upon earth, who, having come from heaven, and dwelt an hour amongst men, became united with the three worlds, by his liberality and knowledge of truth."¹ ¶

Compare the Harivaṃśa, śl. 809. The ordinary reading, there, in the last line, is अनुसंधिताः.

* The Bhāgavata-purāṇa, IX., X., 1, has Raghu, Príthuśravas, Aja.

† अभिसंहित can scarcely bear either of these meanings. Its most probable signification, here, is 'contemplate thoroughly'.

‡ This means 'experienced', i. e., recognized as vanity.'

§ The Váyu-purāṇa has only the last two verses, and does not call them a citation. It reads सत्येन for दानेन.

Khatwángada is, moreover, the form here presented.

¶ Whether the names particularized here, as in many other lists throughout this work, are correctly represented, or not, I do not pretend to pronounce. To this point I have already adverted; giving the reason why we must, at present, look with distrust, in most cases, upon any express or implied claim to punctual accuracy as regards Paurāṇik minutiae: see Vol. I., p. 153, note ‡. In annotating these volumes, all that, as a rule, I have undertaken to do, touching the numerous works referred to in the Translator's commentary, has been, to restrict myself to the most important and most accessible of them, and to collate these, in such manuscripts as are within my reach, and in the printed editions, with my best diligence.

¹ This is an epitome of the Rámáyāṇa, the heroic poem of Válmiki, on the subject of Ráma's exploits. A part of the Rámáyāṇa was published, with a translation, by Messrs. Carey and Marshman, several years since; but a much more correct edition of the text of the two first books, with a Latin translation of the first and part of the second, have been more recently published by Professor Schlegel,—a work worthy of his illustrious name.† A summary of the story may be found in Sir William Jones's Works, Maurice's Hindustan, Moor's Pantheon, &c. It is, also, the subject of the Uttara Ráma Charitra, in the Hindu Theatre; in the introduction to which an outline of the whole is given. The story is, therefore, no doubt, sufficiently familiar, even to English readers. It seems to be founded on historical fact; and the traditions of the south of India uniformly ascribe its civilization,

* बद्धा चाश्वोत्तिष्ठिम् ।

† For Signor Gorresio's edition of the spurious Rámáyāṇa, see Vol. II., p. 190, note *. The genuine Rámáyāṇa—which Professor Wilson does not seem to have known, save in Schlegel's composite edition of the first two books,—has been lithographed at Calcutta and Bombay. For some idea of the difference between the two, the reader is referred to the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, Vol. XIX., pp. 303—308, and to Dr. Muir's Original Sanskrit Texts, Part IV., pp. 377—418. I have seen, in India, no less than seven different commentaries on the real Rámáyāṇa; a copy of one of which, accompanying the text, was transcribed nearly five hundred years ago.

Bharata made himself master of the country of the Gandharvas, after destroying vast numbers of them;* and Śatrughna, having killed the Rākshasa chief, Lavaña, the son of Madhu, took possession of his capital, Mathurā.†

Having, thus, by their unequalled valour and might, rescued the whole world from the dominion of malignant fiends, Rāma, Lakshmaña, Bharata, and Śatrughna reascended to heaven, and were followed by those of the people of Kośala‡ who were fervently devoted to these incarnate portions of the supreme (Vishū). §

Rāma (and his brothers) had (each,) two sons. Kuśa and Lava were the sons of Rāma; those of Lakshmaña were Angada and Chandraketu;|| the sons of Bharata

* The original says that he destroyed thirty millions of terrible gandharvas: उग्रगन्धर्वकोटीस्तिस्रो जघान ।

† Rather, “founded Mathurā”; the Sanskrit being niveśitā. Moreover, the original has nothing corresponding to “his capital”.

The Vāyu-purāṇa reads:

माधवं लवणं हत्वा गत्वा मधुवनं च तत् ।

शत्रुघ्नेन पुरी तत्र मथुरा संनिवेशिता ॥

. And the Bhāgavata-purāṇa says, at IX., XI., 14:

शत्रुघ्नश्च मधोः पुत्रं लवणं नाम राक्षसम् ।

हत्वा मधुवनं चक्रे मथुरां नाम वै पुरीम् ॥

Three of my copies of the Vishū-purāṇa, and two of the Vāyu, have Madhurā, instead of Mathurā. It is not altogether certain that Madhurā was not the original name, and even that heard by Hiouen Tsang.

* One MS. gives Śankhaṇa; one, Chhampaṇa.

† By the kindness of Professor Monier Williams, of Oxford, I am enabled to state, that one of the MSS. of the text of the Vishṇu-purāṇa which formerly belonged to Professor Wilson has तस्मादध्युषिताश्वः, i. e., Adhyushitāśwa; another, ततो ध्युषिताश्वः, the same name, or else Dhyushitāśwa; another, ततो व्युत्थिताश्वः, i. e., Vyutthitāśwa, or Avyutthitāśwa. Again, all Professor Wilson's and all my own MSS. that contain both the text and the commentary here read ततो व्युत्थिताश्वः; while my other MSS.—except one which has ततो व्युषिताश्वः,—give तस्माद्व्युषिताश्वः or शङ्खणाद्व्युषिताश्वः, i. e., Dhyushitāśwa and Vyushitāśwa. Dhyushitāśwa is the name—corrupted, in some copies, into Vyushitāśwa,—in the Vāyu-purāṇa, where we read:

शङ्खणस्य सुतो विद्वानध्युषिताश्व इति श्रुतः ।

ध्युषिताश्वसुतश्चापि राजा विश्वसहः किल ॥

In the Harivamśa, likewise, the true reading, as shown by my best MSS., is, undoubtedly, Dhyushitāśwa. This has been corrupted into Vyushitāśwa, and regularized into Adhyushitāśwa. Vyutthitāśwa looks like a heedless and uninquiring venture at emendation, on the part of the commentator on the Vishṇu-purāṇa.

Conclusively, we find, in the Raghuvamśa, XVIII., 23:

तस्यावसाने हरिदश्वधामा

पित्र्यं प्रपदे पदमश्वरूपः ।

वेलातटेषूपितसैनिकाश्वं

पुराविदो यं ध्युषिताश्वमाहुः ॥

“On his [Śankhaṇa's] death, one endued with the effulgence of the sun, handsome as the Aśvins, and whom those conversant with antiquity call Dhyushitāśwa,—the horses of his troops having encamped on the declivity of the sea-shore,—acceded to the dignity of his fathers.”

My best MSS. of the Raghuvamśa read as above; and the best MSS. of Mallinātha's commentary that I have access to give, likewise, Dhyushitāśwa. Moreover, from a grammatical point of view, Kālidāsa's very etymology, and, similarly, Mallinātha's gloss, unquestionably favour this name, as against Vyushitāśwa.

The strange, but not unjustifiable, name Dhyushitāśwa would naturally son was Viśwasaha;^{1*} his son was Hirañyanábha,† who was a pupil of the mighty Yogin Jaimini, and communicated the knowledge of spiritual exercises: to Yājñavalkya.² The son of this saintly king was provoke, to a careless scholar, a surmise of mistake; and the close resemblance between ध्यु and व्यु, hastily written, may have seemed to support such a surmise. We thus see how, in all likelihood, Vyushitāśwa originated.

"Abhyutthitāśwa", the name in the former edition of the work under annotation, is in none of the MSS. that were used by Professor Wilson; and I have dismissed it for Dhyushitāśwa. It may be added, that Vyutthitāśwa is the name in the translation of the Viśvānu-purāṇa that was prepared for the Professor in Bengal.

Messrs. Boehtlingk and Roth, in their Sanskrit-Wörterbuch, referring to Professor Lassen,—who confessedly copies from Professor Wilson,—insert Adhyushitāśwa, an unavowed alteration of Adhyūshitāśwa.

Turning, for comparison, to the Sanskrit Dictionary of Dr. Goldstücker, we here find that very critical work not only scrupulously holding with Professor Wilson, even to his long and short vowels, but doing so in silence, and, manifestly, without any care of verification. Abhyutthitāśwa is registered; and equally is Adhyūshitāśwa,—a name I have found nowhere,—for the constituent participle of which, rendered "very diseased," recourse is had to the verb ūsh, ægrotare, a mere invention, there is reason to suspect, of the grammarians. At the same time, Kālidāsa's word should seem to have escaped the observation of the learned and researchful lexicographer.

|| On this and "Dūshitāśwa", see note † in the preceding page and the present.

* And so reads the Vāyu-purāṇa.

† In one view, the Bhāgavata-purāṇa, IX., XII., 2, 3, has, instead of Abinagu, &c., Aniha, Pāriyātra, Bala, Sthala, Vajranābha, Khagaṇa, Vi-dhīti, Hirañyanābha.

‡ The expression "knowledge of spiritual exercises" is to render yoga.

§ Premising the name of Viśwasaha, the Vāyu-purāṇa states:

Hirañyanābha seems, thus, to be called the Vasishṭha of Kōśala. But

See, also, p. 58, supra, where Kauśalya is, likewise, given as the synonym of Hirañyanābha;† being, as the commentator observes, his Viśeshanām, his epithet or attribute,—born in, or king of, Kośala. The Vāyu, accordingly, terms him हिरण्यनाभः कौशल्यः; but, in the Bhāgavata,‡ the epithet Kauśalya is referred, by the commentator,§ to Yājñavalkya, the pupil of Hirañyanābha: यतः सकाशात्कौशल्यो याज्ञवल्क्य ऋषिरध्यातुं योगमध्यगात् । The author of the Raghu Vanśa, not understanding the meaning of the term, has converted Kauśalya into the son of Hirañyanābha. || Raghu Vanśa, XVIII., 27. The Bhāgavata, like our text, calls the prince the pupil of Jaimini; the Vāyu, more correctly, जैमिनेः पौत्रस्य शिष्यः, ‘the pupil of the sage’s grandson’. There seems to be, however, something unusual in the account given of the relation, borne by the individuals named, to each other. As a pupil of Jaimini, Hirañyanābha is a teacher of the Sāma-veda (vide supra, p. 58); but Yājñavalkya is the teacher of the Vāja-saneyi branch of the Yajus (vide supra, p. 57). Neither of them some MSS. have Kauśilya, not Kauśalya. Vide supra, p. 58, note †. Then follows the stanza:

पौत्रस्य जैमिनेः शिष्यः स्मृतः सर्वेषु शर्मसु ।

Here, as before, Hirañyanābha is associated with five hundred Saṃhitās.

CHAPTER V.

Kings of Mithilá. Legend of Nimi, the son of Ikshwáku. Birth of Janaka. Sacrifice of Síradhwa. Origin of Sítá. Descendants of Kuśadhwa. Kṛiti the last of the Maithila princes.

THE son of Ikshwáku, who was named Nimi,¹ instituted a sacrifice that was to endure for a thousand years, and applied to Vasishtha to offer the oblations.* Vasishtha, in answer, said, that he had been preengaged, by Indra, for five hundred years, but that, if the Raja would wait for some time, he would come and officiate as superintending priest.† The king made no answer; and Vasishtha went away, supposing that he had assented.‡ When the sage had completed the performance of the ceremonies he had conducted for Indra, he returned, with all speed, to Nimi, purposing to render him the like office. When he arrived, however, and found that Nimi had retained Gautama and other priests to minister at his sacrifice, he was much displeased, and pronounced upon the king, who was then asleep, a curse, to this effect, that, since he had not intimated his intention, but transferred to Gautama the duty he had first entrusted to himself, Vasishtha, Nimi should, thenceforth, cease to exist in a corporeal form. When Nimi woke, and knew what had happened, he, in return, denounced, as an imprecation upon his unjust preceptor, that he, also, should lose his bodily existence, as the punishment of uttering a curse upon him, without previously communicating with him. Nimi then abandoned his bodily condition. The spirit of Vasishṭha, also, leaving his body, was united with the spirits of Mitra and Varuṇa, for a season, until, through their passion for the nymph Urvaśī, the sage was born again, in a different shape.* The corpse of Nimi was preserved from decay, by being embalmed with fragrant oils and resins; and it remained as entire as if it were immortal.¹† When the sacrifice was concluded,

‡ Here the scholiast quotes a proverb, मीनं संमतिलक्षणम्, which may be translated, almost word for word, "Silence implies consent."

* This shows that the Hindus were not unacquainted with the Egyptian art of embalming dead bodies. In the Kāśī Khaṇḍa, s. 30, an account is given of a Brahman who carries his mother's bones, or, rather, her corpse, from Setubandha (or Rāmeśwara) to Kāśī. For this purpose, he first washes it with the five excretions‡ of a cow, and the five pure fluids, (or, milk, curds, ghee, honey, and sugar).§ He then embalms it with Yakshakardama ||

‡ They can hardly be generalized as "excretions". For particulars, see note  to p. 193, supra.

§ So says Raghunandana, in the Jyotistattwa.

|| According to Colebrooke, in his edition of the Amara-kośa, it consists of "camphor, agallochum, musk, and bdellium (or else the three first, with saffron and sandal-wood), in equal proportions."

the priests applied to the gods, who had come to receive their portions, that they would confer a blessing upon the author of the sacrifice. The gods were willing to restore him to bodily life; but Nimi declined its acceptance, saying: "O deities, who are the alleviators of all worldly suffering, there is not, in the world, a deeper cause of distress than the separation of soul and body. It is, therefore, my wish to dwell in the eyes of all beings, but never more to resume a corporeal shape." To this desire the gods assented; and Nimi was placed, by them, in the eyes of all living creatures; in consequence of which, their eyelids are ever opening and shutting.*

He then covers it with pure clay, and puts the whole into a coffin of copper (Tāmra saṁpuṭaka).‡ These practices are not only unknown, but would be thought impure, in the present day.

* ततो भूतान्युन्मेषनिमेषं चक्रुः । This legend would connect the word nimisha, 'wink', with the name of Nimi.

† Corrected from "Mānjishtha", which means only "dyed with madder".

In the text of my MS., paññāmbāra and surasavastra do not appear; but the latter is given as a gloss on netravastra.

As Nimi left no successor, the Munis, apprehensive of the consequences of the earth being without a ruler, agitated the body of the prince,* and produced, from it, a prince, who was called Janaka, from being born without a progenitor.† In consequence of his father being without a body (videha), he was termed, also, Vaideha (the son of the bodiless); and (he, further, received the name of) Mithi, from (having been produced by) agitation (mathana).¹ The son of Janaka was Udā-

* अपुत्रस्य तस्य भूभुजः शरीरमराजकभीरवस्ते मुनयोऽरण्यां ममन्युः।

All my MSS. have अरण्यां, by which we are to understand the nether piece of timber used to produce fire, by attrition, at sacrifices,—the arañi containing a socket, into which the king's body was introduced, by way of upper arañi. On the reading अरण्या, things would be reversed, and a socket for the upper arañi would be furnished in the royal corpse.

The Vāyu-purāṇa says:

तस्य पुत्रो मिथिर्नाम जनितः पर्वभिस्त्रिभिः ।

अरण्यां मध्यमानायां प्रादुर्भूतो महायशः ।

नाम्ना मिथिरिति ख्यातो जननाज्जनकोऽभवत् ॥

A very complete dissertation on the arañi will be found in Dr. Goldstücker's Sanskrit Dictionary, sub voce.

† तत्र च कुमारो जज्ञे । जननाज्जनकसंज्ञां चासाववाप । It was by reason of the peculiar way in which he was engendered, that he was called Janaka.

The Bhāgavata-purāṇa, IX., XIII., 13, says:

Janaka, whence comes the name Mithilā. In other respects, the list of kings of Mithilā agrees, except in a few names. Janaka, the successor of Nimi, is different from Janaka who is celebrated as the father of Sítā. One of them—which, does not appear,—is, also, renowned as a philosopher, and patron of philosophical teachers. Mahābhārata, Moksha Dharma. According to the Vāyu Purāṇa, Nimi founded a city called Jayanta, near the Āśrama of Gautama.‡‡ The remains of a city called Janakpur, on the northern skirts of the district, are supposed to indicate the site of a city founded by one of the princes so named.

* Two of my MSS. have Udāravasu.

† The majority of my MSS. have Swaketu. But Suketu is the accepted reading, as in the Rāmāyaṇa, Bāla-kāṇḍa, LXXI., 5, 6; &c. &c.

¶ In one copy I find Pratīka. Pratindhaka is read in the Rāmāyaṇa and Vāyu-purāṇa, and is, almost certainly, the correct name. Pratīpaka is the Bhāgavata's ordinary corruption. The Bengal Rāmāyaṇa has, according to Signor Gorresio, Prasiddhaka.

 One MS. has Kṛitiratha; another, Śrutiratha. Kirttiratha is the reading of the Rāmāyaṇa and Vāyu-purāṇa. The Bengal Rāmāyaṇa has Kṛittiratha, in Signor Gorresio's edition.

Síradhwaia ploughing the ground, to prepare it for a sacrifice (which he instituted), in order to obtain progeny, there sprang up, in the furrow,¶ a damsel, who became his daughter, Sítá.^{1} The brother of Síradhwaia

¹ This identifies Síradhwaia with the second Janaka, the father-in-law of Ráma. The story of Sítá's birth, or, rather, discovery, is narrated in the Áraṇya Kánda of the Rámáyāṇa, the Vana Parvan of the Mahábhārata, and in the Váyu, Brahma Vaivarta, Káliká, and other Purāṇas.

* Viśruta is the name in the Bhágavata-purāṇa.

† The Váyu-purāṇa shows both this and Dhṛiti. One of them is, perhaps, for the sake of metre. Vide infra, p. 335, note †. The Rámáyāṇa seems to have Mahidhraka, corrupted, in some copies, into Mahándhraka; while the Bengal recension has Andhaka.

‡ Kraturáta occurs in one MS. Kirttiráta: Rámáyāṇa and Váyu-purāṇa.

§ The inferior character of the Bengal recension of the Rámáyāṇa is evidenced by the fact that it here reads, at variance with all authority, Kṛitiroman.

|| A single copy has Swarṇaroman, the synonymous reading of the Rámáyāṇa, of the Váyu-purāṇa, and of the Bhágavata.

¶ Sire, 'on his ploughshare'; for which the word for 'plough' seems to be here used by synecdoche. In the Bhágavata-purāṇa, IX., 13, 18, we read as follows:

 The Váyu-purāṇa, having named Síradhwaia, says:

kya: the former is the father of Keśidhwaĵa; the latter, of Bhánumat.^{} See the last Book of the Vishnú.

* The text of all my MSS. but two has साङ्काश्याधिपतिः, 'king of Sánkáśyá'. And herewith agrees the Váyu-purána. See the quotation in note , below. I have corrected the Translator's "Sankaśya".

 This requires correcting. According to the Bhágavata-purána, IX., XIII., 19—21, Síradhwaĵa begot Kuśadhwaĵa; he, Dharmadhwaĵa; he, Kṛitadhwaĵa and Mitadhwaĵa; Kṛitadhwaĵa, Keśidhwaĵa; Mitadhwaĵa, Khándi-

P. 166, note †. Hemádri's quotations from the Nandi-purána are, I find, too incorrect to be transcribed. They recognize five classes of pitṛis: Agnishwáttas, Barhishads, Kávyas, Sukálinas, and Vyámas. The Nágara-khaṇḍa of the Skanda-purána names six classes: Agnishwáttas, Barhishads, Ájyapas, Somapas, Raśmipas, and Upahútas. In the Vishnúdharmottara we find seven classes, in two groups: Subháswaras, Barhishads, Agnishwáttas, without form; Kravyádas, Upahútas, Ájyapas, Sukálinas, possessing forms. The Śráddhakalpa, from which these particulars are taken, is very full on the subject of the pitṛis.

The Vahni-purána reckons seven classes of pitṛis, entitled Subháswaras, Barhishads, Agnishwáttas, Ájyapas, Upahútas, Kravyádas, and Sukálinas. It agrees, thus, precisely, with the Vishnúdharmottara, as just above referred to.

In the Mahábhárate, Sabhdá-parvan, śl. 341, the names are given of classes of pitṛis called, agreeably to the best MSS. within my reach, Phenapas, Ushmapas, and Sudhávats. In śl. 461—463, seven classes are enumerated: Vairájas, Agnishwáttas, Gárhapatyas, Somapas, Ekaśringas, Chaturvedas, and Kálas:

पितृणां च गणान्विद्धि सप्तैव पुरुषर्षभ ।

मूर्तिमन्तो वै चत्वारस्त्रयश्चाप्यशरीरिणः ॥

वैराजाश्च महाभागा अग्निष्वात्ताश्च भारत ।

गार्हपत्या नाकचराः पितरो लोकविश्रुताः ॥

सोमपा एकशृङ्गाश्च चतुर्वेदाः कलास्तथा ।

एते चतुर्षु वर्णेषु पूज्यन्ते पितरो नृप ॥

The last-named classes are said to be honoured among the four castes. Compare p. 163, note †.

In the Rigveda, X., XIV. and XV., we read of the Kavyas, Barhishads, Agnishwáttas, Upahútas, &c. &c.; and—compare p. 166, note *,—the distinction is, thus early, made of pitṛis into the divisions of Agnidagdhas and Anagnidagdhas.

To exhaust the subject of these demigods, or even to collect all the more ancient passages in which they figure, would require considerable research.

In the Vāyu-purāṇa, the origin of the pitṛis is stated as follows:

पितृवन्मन्यमानस्तान्पुत्रान्प्राध्यायत प्रभुः ।

पितरो ह्युपपन्नाभ्यां राज्यहोरांतरासृजत् ॥

तस्मात्ते पितरो देवाः पुत्रत्वं तेन तेषु तत् ।

यथा सृष्टास्तु पितरस्तां तनुं स व्यपोहत ॥

"Regarding himself as a father, he [Prajāpati] thought upon these sons: he created Fathers (Pitṛis) from his armpits, in the interval between day and night. Hence these Fathers are gods: therefore that sonship belongs to them. He cast aside the body with which the Fathers were created." Original Sanskrit Texts, Part I., pp. 78, 79. (2nd ed.).

Trisanku, the Buddhist, uses the following language regarding Brāhmanas: "Quand ils veulent manger de la viande, voici le moyen qu'ils emploient: ils tuent les animaux en prononçant des Mantras, parce que, disent-ils, les brebis ainsi immolées vont droit au ciel. Mais si c'est là le chemin du ciel, pourquoi donc ces Brāhmanes n'immolent-ils pas aussi avec des Mantras eux et leurs femmes, leur père et leur mère, leurs frères et leurs sœurs, leurs fils et leurs filles? * * * Non, il n'est pas vrai que l'eau lustrale et que les Mantras fassent monter au ciel les chèvres et les brebis; toutes ces inventions sont des moyens employés par ces méchants Brāhmanes pour satisfaire leur désir de manger de la viande." P. 231, note ||. The legend of the Aitareya-brāhmaṇa, there referred to, is translated, by Dr. Muir, as follows: "The brothers of Nābhāne-dishtha disinherited him, whilst he was living in the state of a Brahmachárin. Coming (to them), he said: 'What share have you given to me?' They replied: '(We have given thee) this judge and divider, (as thy share).' In consequence, sons, even now, speak of their father as the 'judge and divider.' He came to his father, and said: 'Father, they have given thee to me, as my share.' His father answered: 'Do not, my son, care about that. These Angirases are performing a sacrifice, in order to (secure) the heavenly world; but, as often as they come to the sixth day (of the ceremony), they become bewildered. Make them recite these two hymns (R. V., x., 61 and 62) on the sixth day; and, when they are going to heaven, they will give thee that provision of a thousand which has been made for the sacrifice.' He said: 'So be it.' He approached them, saying: 'Receive me, the son of Mann, ye sages.' They replied: 'With what object dost thou speak?' He said: 'Let me make known to you this sixth day; and then you shall give me this sacrificial provision of a thousand, when ye are going to heaven.' 'Let it be so,' they answered. He made them repeat these two hymns on the sixth day. They then knew the sacrifice and the heavenly world. Hence, when any one repeats these two hymns on the sixth day, it is with a view to a knowledge of the sacrifice, and to the revelation of the heavenly world. When they were going to the heavenly world, they said to him: 'This thousand, O Bráhmaṇ, is thine.' As he was collecting (the thousand), a man in dark clothing rose up before him, from the north, and said: 'This is mine; what remains on the spot is mine.' Nábhānedishtha replied: 'But they have given it to me.' (The man) rejoined: 'It belongs to (one of) us; let thy father be asked.' He went to his father, who asked: 'Have they not given thee (the thousand), my son?' 'They did give it to me,' he replied; 'but a man in dark clothes rose up before me, from the north, and took it from me, saying, 'This is mine; what remains on the spot is mine.' His father said: 'It is his; but he will give it to thee.' He returned, and said (to the man): 'This is thine, reverend sir; so my father says.' (The man) replied: 'I will give it to thee, who hast spoken the truth.' Wherefore one who has this knowledge should speak only truth. That is a hymn which bestows a thousand,—that Nábhānedishtha hymn. A thousand falls to his lot, he knows the heavenly world on the sixth day—the man who knows this." Original Sanskrit Texts, Part I., pp. 192, 193, (2nd ed.).

A relative passage, referred to in p. 257, note †, is then given, from the Taittiriya-saṁhitā of the Yajurveda: "Manu divided his property to his sons. He disinherited his son Nábhānedishtha, who was living as a Brahmachárin. He came and said: 'How hast thou disinherited me?' 'I have not disinherited thee,' replied (his father): 'these Angirases are celebrating a sacrifice. They do not know the heavenly world. Declare to them this Bráhmaṇa; and, when they are going to heaven, they will give thee the cattle they have.' He declared the Bráhmaṇa to them; and, when they were going to heaven, they gave him the cattle they had. Rndra came to him, as he was on the place of sacrifice, employed with the cattle, and said: 'These are my cattle.' 'But,' replied Nábhānedishtha, 'they have given them to me.' 'They have not power to do so: that which is left on the place of sacrifice is mine,' answered Rudra. Hence, the place of sacrifice must not be approached. (Rudra further) said: 'Give me a share in the sacrifice, and I shall not injure thy cattle.' He offered him this libation of soma and flour. Then Rudra did not injure his cattle. Whenever any one knows this libation of soma and flour, and offers it up, Rudra does not injure his cattle."

- P. 232, notes, l. 6 ab infra. According to the Linga-purāṇa, the Manu's sons were nine; and their names are as in the Mārkaṇḍeya-purāṇa, saving that Dhṛishṇu and Arishṭa take the places of Dhṛishṭa and Disṭa. Except for Arishṭa instead of Disṭa, the nine names, in the Brahma-purāṇa, are the same as those in the Mārkaṇḍeya-purāṇa. The Vahni-purāṇa gives Manu ten sons, with appellations altogether peculiar, as a whole; and the same may be said of the Matsya-purāṇa, my MSS. of which here present, for the rest, a good number of various readings.

- P. 246, note *. See p. 311, note *.
- P. 248, note ||. The ensuing legend is taken from the Śatapatha-brāhmaṇa, IV., V., 1, etc.: Chyavana of the race of Bhṛigu, or Chyavana of the race of Angiras, having magically assumed a shrivelled form, was abandoned. Śaryāta, the descendant of Manu, wandered over this [world], with his tribe. He sat down in the neighbourhood [of Chyavana]. His youths, while playing, fancied this shrivelled magical body to be worthless, and pounded it with clods. Chyavana was incensed at the sons of Śaryāta. He created discord among them, so that father fought with son, and brother with brother. Śaryāta bethought him, 'what have I done, in consequence of which this calamity has befallen us?' He ordered the cowherds and shepherds to be called, and said, 'which of you has seen anything here to day?' They replied, 'this shrivelled magical body which lies there is a man. Fancying it was something worthless, the youths pounded it with clods.' Śaryāta knew, then, that it was Chyavana. He yoked his chariot, and, taking his daughter Sukanyā, drove off, and arrived at the place where the Ṛishi was. He said, 'Reverence to thee, Ṛishi! I injured thee, because I did not know. This is Sukanyā: with her I appease thee. Let my tribe be reconciled.' His tribe was, in consequence, reconciled; and Śaryāta, of the race of Manu, strove that he might never again do injury to any one. Now, the Aświns used to wander over this world, performing cures. They approached Sukanyā, and wished to seduce her; but she would not consent. They said to her: 'Sukanyā, what shrivelled magical body is this by which thou liest? Follow us.' She replied: 'I will not abandon, while he lives, the man to whom my father gave me.' The Ṛishi became aware of this. He said, 'Sukanyā, what was this that they said to thee?' She told it to him. When informed, he said, 'If they address thee thus again, say to them, 'ye are neither complete nor perfect, and yet ye speak contemptuously of my husband;' and, if they ask 'in what respect are we incomplete and imperfect?' then reply, 'make my husband young again, and I will tell you.' Accordingly, they came again to her, and said the same thing. She answered, 'Ye are neither complete nor perfect, and yet ye talk contemptuously of my husband.' They inquired, 'In what respect are we incomplete and imperfect?' She rejoined, 'make my husband young again, and I will tell you.' They replied, 'take him to this pond, and he shall come forth with any age which he shall desire. She took him to the pond; and he came forth with the age that he desired. The Āświns then asked, 'Sukanyā, in what respect are we incomplete and imperfect?' To this the Ṛishi replied: 'The other gods celebrate a sacrifice in Kurukshetra, and exclude you two from it. That is the respect in which ye are incomplete and imperfect.' The Āświns then departed, and came to the gods who were celebrating a sacrifice, when the Bahishpavamāna text had been recited. They said, 'Invite us to join you.' The gods replied, 'We will not invite you; for ye have wandered about very familiarly among men, performing cures.' The Āświns rejoined, 'Ye worship with a headless sacrifice.' They asked, 'How [do we worship] with a headless [sacrifice]?' The Āświns answered, 'Invite us to join you, and we will tell you.' The gods consented, and invited them. They offered this Āświna draught (graha) to the Āświns, who became the two adhvaryu priests of the sacrifice, and restored the head of the sacrifice. It is related, in the Brāhmaṇa of the Divākirttyas, in what manner they restored the head of the sacrifice," etc., etc. Dr. Muir, in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, New Series, Vol. II., pp. 11—13.

- P. 313, note ¶. A special reason for my having declined to enter into particulars as to what is found in the Matsya-purāṇa is, that the copies of it accessible to me are, for the most part, exceedingly incorrect, and, in the matter of proper names, exhibit the widest discrepancy. I may add, that my MSS. seem to support the list of names to which this note is appended.
